LOVE'S DEBT.

Some Things a Good Daughter Owes Her Mother. What does a girl "owe" her mother? To manifest an interest in whatever affects or amuses her.

To seek the mother's comfort and pleasure in all things before one's own. Not to forget, though she may be old and wrinkled, she still loves pretty things.

To make her simple gifts, and be sure that they are appropriate and tasteful. To remember she is still a girl at heart, so far as delicate little attentions are concerned.

To lift the many burdens from shoulders that have grown stooped, perhaps, in waiting upon her girls and in working for them.

Never by word or deed to signify that the daughter's word and hers differ or that one feels the mother is out of date.

To study her tastes and habits, her likes and dislikes, and cater to them in an unobtrusive way.

To bear patiently with all her peculiarities and infirmities, which, after all, may be the result of a life of care and toil.

To defer to her opinions, even if they do seem antiquated, and not obstreperously to possess the wisdom of one's college education.

To do one's best in keeping the mother youthful in appearance as well as in spirit by overseeing her costume and the little details of her toilet.

Not to shock her by turning into ridicule her religious prejudices if they happen to be at variance with one's own advanced views.

To introduce to her one's friends and resist her sympathies in one's projects, hopes and plans.

Beaton - Peart Nuptials

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, Jan. 9th at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs Geo E Peart of "Fairview" farm when their only daughter, Mary was united in marriage to Mr Henry Beaton, son of Mr and Mrs John G. Beaton of Glenelg, Rev. E. S. Moyer officiating. The bride looked charming in her gown of white crepe de chene and georgette crepe with pearl trimmings, wearing her bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms carrying her bouquet of white and pink tea roses with maiden hair fern. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue velour with hat to match.

The bride who was given away by her father, being unattended entered the parlor which was beautifully decorated for the occasion to the strains of the wedding march played by the groom's sister, Miss Mabel Beaton and took her place beside the handsome groom beneath an arch of evergreens, artistically decorated with white satin ribbon caught up in a lover's knot by three white doves over the wedding bell and trimmed with bridal roses.

After the ceremony the guests numbering about seventy-five, only immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present, entered the spacious dining room and sat down to a sumptuous repast after which the bride's pastor, Rev. Mr Moyer proposed the health of the bride and groom in a humorous speech, (after all doing justice to the dainty eatables).

The guests proceeded to the parlor and the evening was spent in music and games. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly gifts, the groom's being a pearl pendant and to the organist a cameo and pearl pendant also a number of cheques showing the esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

With their numerous friends we join in wishing much happiness and prosperity. They will reside on the groom's home farm at Glenelg Centre.

Lieut.-Col. F. F. Hunter, D.S.O.

"Allies Must Save Russia From Ruin"

The following from a Minneapolis paper will be read with interest, coming from an about-a-Durham boy with much war experience. We have seen nothing to excel his graphic delineation of internal conditions in Russia:

"The Allies must reorganize Russia. Russia cannot, within the limits of time necessary to war success, reorganize herself. No government can deal with starving masses without great force behind it. The Allies must use the whip hand if they would save Russia to democracy."

This is the conclusion of Lieutenant Colonel F. F. Hunter, commander of the Fars (India army) brigade, chief of staff of the British forces in Persia, who recently returned from observation of Russian revolutionary conditions and who has spent a year and a half with the Russians on the Persian and Caucasian front in support of the right flank of General Maude's army.

LIEUT.-COL. F. F. HUNTER, D.S.O.

Colonel Hunter is visiting his brother James A. Hunter, 3408 Calhoun avenue. He is on sick leave and will remain a few days in Minneapolis on his way to report on Russian conditions to Washington.

He was with the Don Cossacks when they marched to join General Korniloff in the move on Petrograd, then with the British flying corps in Moscow during the revolutionary demonstration after the Korniloff affair; then went to Petrograd, where he was engaged in various activities for the reorganization of the Russian army. Fresh from these scenes in Russia Colonel Hunter says:

Transport, labor and exchange difficulties, plus politics, have kept Russia in an absolute state of chaos and anarchy for seven months. The peasants are starving and force is the only weapon that a starving mass of people will obey. They will listen to any one who will put food in their mouths.

"They killed their own officers because the Germans told them they were being sold to the German army. Anything or any one who attempts to curtail her liberty is a tyrant, they believe, and is treated as such."

Kerensky was a dreamer; he put Russia and Russian liberty first. Winning the war must be first, or the Germans will get control of the country to protect their frontier. The peasants want control of the land, and in their abyssmal ignorance whenever a new leader promises them a portion of the land they will desert the army at the front and immediately start back to the congested districts.

"This ties up what little transportation there is and prevents the distribution of food and munitions. Of the 15,000,000 men mobilized in Russia fewer than 2,000,000 are now in the front."

All Railroads Tie Up "The faulty judgment of the Russian leaders in locating the industries near Petrograd and Moscow, when the raw materials had to be transported from the Caucasian district, has so tied up the railroads that munitions and men can not be transported to and from the fighting front. Also, the lack of faith in the Russian ruble keeps the ignorant peasant from trying to market his crop, and in some places wheat lies rotting on the ground."

"Eleven million of the soldiers mobilized have deserted from various causes. They loot whatever they can get their hands on while trying to reach their homes. They are suffering all the horrors of anarchy without purpose. We saw the burning oil wells at Baku which the Russians had fired in a burst of patriotic zeal."

"Also, from careful observation of conditions among Russian revolutionists who are in touch with the same element in Germany, I think it can be safely said there is no ground for hoping there will be a German revolution during the war."

Realized Even By Children "Every German child, even, has been taught to know he must not do anything to upset the distribution of food, whatever his political opinion may be, or he will starve. A complete victory for the allies is the only thing that will break the reverence for the German system that has been made an absolute part of German peasant's life."

Colonel Hunter has been with the British army in India for 21 years. He speaks Persian, French, Afghan "pushtu", Hindustani, German and some Russian. He fought with the Americans in Ceina during the Boxer uprising. He fought the wild tribesmen of Afghanistan and Mesopotamia under German leadership, and now he wants to fight the Germans in Flanders, because while he says "war is absolute hell, it's our business," which is an Englishman's way of saying "it's up to us."

Last Christmas day Colonel Hunter calmly walked across a shell-swept no man's land to a point within 40 yards of the Turkish forces as they tried to force open a junction near Bagdad to rescue a brother officer who had fallen, wounded.

Shells Scream Overhead A bullet struck Colonel Hunter in the right arm as he bent to raise the wounded man. They both fell and for three hours lay with shells screaming over them. Finally Colonel Hunter made his way back to his lines and led a charge that not only swept the Turks from their positions in the pass, but rescued the wounded officer.

But this was all in the day's work of a soldier. From Bagdad Colonel Hunter, with two squadrons of cavalry, fought his way across Persia and Armenia to the Russian frontier, battling almost continuously with wild desert tribes. Turkish bandits and Persian forces under German leadership, suffering thirst, lack of food and in constant danger from the sandstorms prevalent in that district.

But this, too, was all in the day's work of a soldier.

Rewarded for Heroism Nine months later, when Colonel Hunter reached Japan on his way home and received the first despatches from his government, he learned for the first time he had been awarded the D. S. O. (Distinguished Service Order)

The wound in his arm and the hardships of his 2,000-mile journey, along with lack of proper nourishment, undermined his health. After a short rest here he will try to go back to the command of his squadron.

When Pigs Were Cheap

IN your grandfather's day — ask him about it — you could buy a dressed hog for three dollars; a nice big pig. And a live pig would cost you no more.

Everything in those bygone days was cheap—that is, the things of common use.

Clothes, boots, milk, bread, beefsteak, eggs, butter, firewood, lumber, farm labor, domestic servants—they all cost a good deal less than they do today.

It cost less to live—and less to be born—and less to die fifty years ago than today.

And it cost much less to publish a country weekly fifty years ago than it does today—very much less.

Yet you paid—or your father or grandfather did—just a dollar a year—the same as you have all along been paying. Yet year after year the subscription price of these papers remained the same.

But the dollar rate has yielded to the pressure of necessity. We are doing now what we ought to have done years ago—raise the price of the Review to $1.50. The tremendously increased costs of paper, ink, supplies, and the more-than-doubtful cost of living have made us "furiously to think." And so, on and after January 1st the price of The Review is $1.50 a year.

If you were in our place, and knew all we know about the higher costs of publishing, you would wonder how we didn't make the advance long ago. We trust you to meet the new rate with a smile. Not for 50 cents a year will you say "Stop my paper"
