Chevrolet material, in "Four-Ninety" model, is not built to meet a price. The care exercised in the selection of materials proves this statement conclusively.

Price $825, F. O. B., Oshawa

Genuine quality of construction has been maintained at all times.

The overhead valve motor, with detachable cylinder head, is cast en block (including the upper half of the crank case) of closely grained gray iron, properly seasoned. The flexibility and durability of this superior metal is commended by scientific men.

The wearing parts are built of carefully selected material, thoroughly tempered and reheated time and time again, as each case requires, to meet the demand of utmost strength.

The main plates of front and rear semi-cantilever springs, rear axle, and third member shafts, and gears in the three-speed transmission, are of Chrome Vanadium steel. In the motor, the connecting rods, crank shaft and cam shaft are, too, of this material. The knuckles and steering arms of the front axle are Chrome Vanadium; and the cones of the front wheel bearings are high Chrome Carbon Vanadium washed steel. In fact, at each vital point in the power, transmission and control systems, the metal parts are of this guaranteed wear-resisting material.

The brakes are adequately in size, assuring absolute safety in the moment of need.
