THE RED FRONT HARDWARE

This week we are offering Exceptional Values in

McClary's Steel Ranges

The main question to be considered in the selection of a Range is "How long will it last; what satisfaction will I derive from it; what is the fuel consumption and the general up-keep?" In placing before you the reliable Ranges of the McClary Company, we do so with the knowledge of what they have done in the past, the satisfaction they have given, and the Company's long experience in their manufacture. They are "Standard" Ranges, made by one of the best stove manufacturing companies in America, and are known from coast to coast.

The "PANDORA"
for Coal, Coke or Wood

"Pandora" in Canada is a household name. It stands for the best. The "Pandora" is equipped with large quick baking oven; the flues are scientifically constructed in order that the fire box, flues and opening into the smoke pipe will work together to give the best cooking results, with the minimum amount of fuel. The triple barred grates of the "Pandora" are so constructed that each bar may be shaken separately, the bars are three faced so that all may alternately be turned to the fire and are of exceptional durability. The fire box linings are made of the famous semi steel and are practically indestructible. These and many other exclusive features make the "Pandora" an ideal Range for home use.

This range is furnished with a high warming closet and shelf, a reservoir of best pressed sheet steel with best quality enamel and with thermometer in oven door

Our Price this Week... $89.00

The "KOOTENAY"
for Coal, Coke or Wood

The "Kootenay" is a high grade steel Range, moderate in price and economical on fuel. It has a burnished top, is easily cleaned, will not crack, warp or bulge. The oven is made of the best materials and is spacious, square and deep. The linings of the fire-box are made of semi-steel and are practically indestructible. This

From Belgium to Blighty

From the Battlefields to Books.
C.C. Ramage now in Khaki College

Ripon, Yorkshire, Eng., 6th March.
Have made a break in a new direction, and here I am "clinked" in Yorkshire, attending Khaki College, the Soldiers' University. I landed in England four days ago, ahead of the Division, which is still in Belgium, but booked for Blighty this month, and possibly sail in April.

However since I have sidestepped, it means that I will not go home when the "red patch" goes. I will be staying here till July having entered on a prescribed 4 months course here, where if one qualifies, it is equivalent to a year's term in any Canadian University. Of course it is a heartbreak for me to put off the day of sailing, but I think the sacrifice of a couple of months will be well repaid. Then the course here will help serve as a "settler" to regain civilian nerves and outlook again. It certainly requires a lot of will-bending to settle in the book groove once more.

The main unsatisfactory feature is that the military still control us and we are still subject to their discipline in camp. However we have no parades or drills, all the time devoted to lectures, play or study. The College has an attendance of 600, the majority having come from Belgium in preference to wasting time there. There are several officers in the classes, Majors, Captains, Lieutenants. They still retain their mess rights and officers' privileges. Of course better food and quarters are necessary for them, they being subjected, it is alleged, to more brain fag as students, than we are. All ranks retain their former rates of pay.

Nathan Grierson of Bentinck and John L. McDonald from near Priceville are here. The latter who had finished two years in Arts, came here for a third term but that course is not open here and they have placed him as instructor in the Commercial classes.

Ripon is a typical Yorkshire town of 10,000 population, 26 miles from Leeds. It is about half way between London and Edinburgh, and thus out of the neighborhood of friends in both places. However "C'est la guerre."

Before leaving Belgium finally, I decided to visit Brussels, Antwerp and Waterloo and managed to last three days before I crashed financially then I beat it for Blighty. Antwerp and Brussels are second editions of "gay Paree," and life swings along merrily while the money lasts. In a Brussels restaurant or hotel you pay 15 francs or $3 for a half sized meal. You in Canada scarcely know what high cost of living means.

However the gaiety of life in Belgian cities is not affected. Cafes, theatres, restaurants work over time. My friend and I arrived in Antwerp at 9 p. m. and the first glance we declared the place had been killed dead. A machine gun might have been fired down the street and hit no one, an hour later a liveliness developed, by 11, as theatres emptied, the streets were crowded with a fashionably dressed crowd and life continued "high" until 3 a. m. From Brussels to Calais, a slow train dragged us along. We went through Ghent and Bruges and crossed the old battle zone at Dixmude. The desolation in the region of the Yser river is terrible to behold. In the early morning mists over the Flanders plains, the scene of ruined towns and villages is a ghastly spectacle and presents a panorama, that could not be duplicated on any other front, and in the midst of it all the stately Yser, which once was dyed red with the blood of our soldiers, flows placidly on straight as a taut wire, never swerving an inch.

I was in Dunkirk a few hours. A large monument is erected in the main square of the city to the hero Jean Bart. A rough passage across the Channel brought us to Folkestone and reached London in two hours.

London has had a renaissance: the streets are resuming pre-war appearance, and at night lots of light. The city awakes with a kind of all nationalities but the civilian display of man's attire is gaining as the army disbands. The London "Nut" has returned and makes his splash on Bond St. and Piccadilly, as in pre-war days. Picardy is forgotten, he is now a resplendent being in his new attire, even to the monocle, his mark of distinction. I am sending you some souvenirs and my gas mask which on more than one occasion has saved my life. . . . C. C. R.

PRICEVILLE AND LIMITS

intended for last week.
(Our Correspondent writes from Toronto as follows:)

This Monday, St. Patrick's 17th of Ireland, is disagreeable, raining and somewhat like a day near the beginning of May up in the County of Grey when the farmers are beginning to get busy with the seeding and a rainy day comes to give them a rest.

This is a busy city; it seems that everybody is on the move, everyone attending to his own business.

We were pleased to have a reading of the Review. We were sorry to see the death of an old Priceville boy, that of Mr. Geo. Simpson, George came to Priceville when about 3 yrs. old and when reaching the years of manhood and being that of a former many reminiscences of his work are seen in frame barns and other buildings he was the builder of.

There is a time of sorrow and a time of joy so we send congratulations to Mr. Finlay McCraig of Top Cliff who joined heart and hand to Miss Lawrence, now of Durham. We wish the young couple much happiness on the voyage of life. Finlay will be greatly missed by his comrades but more so by his father, parting with his faithful son who always proved himself a trust worthy son attending to the duties entrusted to him. Miss Lawrence, now Mrs. McCraig, will be missed by her aged mother who often entertained us when on duty in Glenelg.

On Saturday, the 15th March, we took a trip to King Township accompanied by our soldier son Hector, our friends Mr and Mrs Hugh McLean where we were kindly entertained and although the elements outside were very disagreeable we were comfortably seated in a cosy room awaiting to partake of the abundance of good things in preparation by Mrs. McLean. Mr. McLean is an old Glenelg boy and Mrs. McLean an old Vaughan girl. Mr. McLean and son Gordon are successful farmers on the 5th line of the Township of King, 25 miles north of Toronto.

We had the pleasure of spending an evening with Mr and Mrs Neil McKinnon and family and were kindly entertained.

We had a pleasant call at Miss Jeanie Cameron's residence on Yonge St. Miss Cameron carries on a large business in the hair-dressing business. She has Miss McEchnie of Top Cliff, Mrs. McPherson of 888 College St. is always kept busy in the hair-dressing also and has some of Priceville's girls in the service, being Miss McLean and Miss Ferguson.

The other day we were looking at some of those engaged at the Parliament Buildings cutting down an old oak tree which was decayed. Probably it stood for many a century by the side of the roots. It took four seemingly green hands to cut it down in a half a day. And then, those using the saw, apparently did not know how to handle it and we were thinking if Norman McInyre and Archie McDonald were using the saw they could teach them how to keep their saw in order.

Dr. Hutton gave us a call some time ago in this building.
Mr J. P. Telford called on the Speaker, Dr. Jamieson Monday afternoon. We hope to hear of him im-

THE PEOPLE'S MILLS

Danger of Another War?

The forces of the Bolsheviks in Russia are constantly being augmented from within the country and from without to such an extent that the Allies were almost at their wit's end how to meet the situation.

The latest and most serious accession is that of Hungary, which has declared for an armed alliance with the "Reds" of Russia, with the avowed intention of dominating the continent and ultimately Britain and the United States.

The Peace Conference delegates are working in feverish haste to bring about peace with Germany, but every day sees England becoming more arrant and indignant at the peace proposals they are to be asked to sign. Without doubt they are behind Hungary and the intriguing crew may even link up with Bolshevism, not that they love it, but that they hate the Allies more.

Much depends on Poland and Rumania in stemming the Western rush of this barbarism, and the Allies are helping them where possible, with men and money.

The German snake itself has its fangs completely pulled, but their long heads have still power of harm by plotting. If the conference as one of its first acts had demanded personal punishment of some of the leaders, it would have had a salutary influence; they dare not do it now.
