PRICEVILLE VILLAGE

The entertainment given by the Methodist Ladies' Aid in Flesherton on St. Patrick's Day, is to be repeated in Watson's Hall, Priceville, on Friday evening, April 11th. A very humorous and entertaining play entitled "Aunt Susan's Visit" will be presented by twenty characters.

Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. Duncan McDonald and daughters in the loss of their daughter and sister.

Glad to welcome home Surg. Arch. McKinnon who arrived on Saturday noon train. Jack Meads and Clark McMillan also came to Ceylon. Albert Hazard came last week looking hale and hearty.

Miss Margaret McInnis and aunt Mrs. Cameron attended Nurse McDonald's funeral.

Dan McKinnon left this week for the West where he will take up his former position.

We see by The Globe Capt. Hector McKinnon is again in Canada. It doesn't seem quite right for Heck not to come back to Priceville as home.

Postmaster Rob McConkey visited the city last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. McDonald spent a few days in the city. The latter consulted a Specialist and is reported to be getting along nicely.

Dave McLeod is again in Priceville after receiving his discharge.

Rob and Will McElvride visited friends and relatives here last week.

We saw Drs. Jamieson and Hutton in town several times last week. Everyone seems to have the cold.

Miss Mary McKinnon left for Toronto Monday to learn the hair-dressing. All good wishes of the P.C.S. go with you Mary.

The concert to be held here has been postponed till the roads are better.

father and daughter who in life lived pleasantly together, are both gone. They lie side by side in a beautiful plot in McNeill's cemetery. To the sister far away in distant parts of the world the sad news to her is great affliction. Mr. Davies, deceased's brother-in-law, accompanied the remains from Brandon and is at present endeavoring to comfort the bereaved ones as well as possible by his presence with them.

Wreaths from the family, wreath from the Matron and Nurses Emergency Flia Hospital, Brandon, sprays from Miss Jennie Cameron, Toronto; Margaret McInnes, Toronto; Mrs. F. McPherson, Toronto and from Miss Alice McDougall, Toronto, a chum deceased; from Misses Phoebe and Jessie Livingstone, Toronto; wreath from Mr. and Mrs. F. Turnbull, Durham and one from Mr. John Davies, deceased's brother-in-law of Leith-bridge, Alta.

The pall bearers were John Calder, Willie Leith, Pte Hector and Arch. McDonald, Lawrence McKeown and Arch. McKinnon, all cousins but Mr. McKinnon.

A few short hours of evil past We reach the happy shore Where death divided friends at last Shall meet to part no more.

SWINTON PARK

Sugar-making has been the order of the day until the cold weather of the last few days has caused it off. Sap was never known to run faster in these parts.

Mr. W. Knox and G. McLeod are cutting wood for Mr. J. Aldcorn.

Mr. J. Hardy has purchased a new motor from Mr. Neil Clark.

Miss M. Aldcorn and M. Knox are assisting Mr. H. Watson stock taking.

Messrs. W. J. Knox and Andy Wright were to Ayton on Saturday.

Pte. C. McNulty arrived home from overseas on Friday last. He went overseas with the 24th.

Pte. E. Richardson has landed in Toronto and is expected home this Monday.

Sigs. B. Knox and Pte. F. Knox have also landed home, the former with the 4th C.M. and the latter with the 58th. Both are now in Toronto.

Mr. P. McMurdo leaves this week for Montana.

Mr. Sam McLean left for the West last Tuesday.

Misses Lucy Wilson and Vera Campbell have left for Iowa. They will be greatly missed here as they were favorites and took an active part in singing at concerts. Wilfred is lonesome now. To ease his sorrow he accompanied them to Toronto. Levd only went to Dandak.

HOPEVILLE

The cold snap of last week with heavy north winds have delayed syrup operations.

We are glad to have a hearty shake of the hand from Sgt. Jas. Duffield. Jim looks remarkable considering his rough experiences overseas. He goes to Owen Sound this week to visit friends. His brother John is expected any day to Mr. Jos. Clark's.

Miss Mary Starrock visited her sister, Mrs. Will Kiddell last week.

Mr. Orannder is a busy man cutting wood and boiling sap.

We welcome to our midst Mrs. Webster and family, having purchased Mr. Will McEachie's farm.

Mr. Jos. Dingwall has rented Mr. Geo. Hunter's farm. Mr. H. and family leave to day for Moosehart, Sask. Our good wishes go with them.

Pte. A. H. and Mitchell Barnett visited Mr. and Mrs. Whyte, Priceville Saturday. Mitchell leaves to-day to join Mr. Whyte's son at Creelman, Sask., in his farming operations.

Intended for last week

Beautiful spring weather prevails. Sp. F. W. Death and Pte. P. McMurdo are in Toronto this week for their discharge.

Pte. A. H. Barnett arrived in Toronto Thursday a. m. His father was there to meet him, coming home Saturday a. m.

A reception was given them in Dandak by Mr. D. Campbell, druggist, and at home by Miss Annie Dez-

Imported Brides Spoil the War for Many of Our Girls

English Girls' Y. M. C. A. Has Been a Great Institution

(By Annie Gray Butcher in the Toronto Star Weekly.)

It looked to me like our Girls' Sewing Circle was going to turn into a Sighin' Circle when the soldier boys started arriving with their imported brides.

I guess them brides is what they call the "spoils of war." They've spoiled the war for a lot of Canadian girls, I know that.

"I was on my way to the closing meeting of the Circle when I met a boy I know who brought home a bride with him, and I asked him how it was that so many Canadian boys had married Old Country girls.

"Well, you know," says he "when the boys were here they had their sisters and mothers and aunts and girl friends to pet and scold, and advise and praise, and prop them up generally. When they got to England they missed all that—specialty the proppin' up part, and when a wee English girl came along and offered her sympathy and help she looked good to a lonely boy."

I understood perfect. A man is like that. He's just simply got to have something to lean on. Why if a man landed at the North Pole, the first thing he'd do would be to look around for something to lean on, and if he couldn't find anything better he'd lean on the pole.

The boy told me the girls' Y. M. C. A. had been a great comfort to the soldiers in England and France.

"The girls' Y. M. C. A.," says I. "Why I never heard of that before. What is it."

"You May Call Again," says he.

When I got to the Circle room I found the girls all sitting around the sewing table talkin' about the boys. One of them brought a chair for me, and says she: "Take a seat at the Peace table. We've just been discussin' the League of Nations as ex-emplified by the Canadian boys nations, and we don't approve of it. After all we've done for those boys too, learning to knit and everything. I tell you, if there's ever another war, it won't be only the boys that stay home that'll have cold feet if I have anything to do with it. I sent a boy so many socks that the men in his battalion christened him with a "Scotch bride." I think the boys might have come home and looked us over once more in us before they decided that they liked the overseas girls best. It isn't fair."

"I've nearly gone bankrupt sendin' boxes to Bill," explained an indignant little stenographer. "He got married in a month after he reached England and he never went to France. He and his missus could have lived on the boxes I sent him and got other people to send him. I never suspected he was married, though he did tell me in one letter that he'd taken up with a "pal" that worked in a shipyard. I never thought of a girl working in a shipyard. I didn't tumble even when he asked me to cut out the smokes and eat red chocolates."

"Perhaps he said 'gal.' Bill always was an awful writer," says the Bank girl. "How do you happen to know so much about Bill's writing?" asked the stenographer, suspicious.

"I've been sending him boxes too," sighed the Bank girl.

"And so have we," groaned the two salesladies.

"My word!" says the stenographer. "Bill must have been running a canteen."

"You remember that lovely brown home-made sweater of mine, girls," said the school teacher. "Well Jim was just crazy about the color and I promised to send a scarf that shade. I hunted the city over, but I couldn't get wool like that, so I ravelled out my sweater, knitted the wool into a scarf and sent it to him. Last night I went down to meet the troop train and who should off but Jim and his wife. And where do you think my scarf was?"

"Around Jim's wife," chorused the girls.

"No, around Jim's baby," said the school teacher. "The dearest, sweetest, prettiest baby you ever saw. I forgave all when he put his plump little hand in mine, and I started to-day to knit him a pink and white hug-me-tight."

"I was down to meet that troop train last night," says the college girl. "Bob and his bride came in on that. When Bob went away he swore he'd bring back a Victoria Cross. He was always talkin' about it. Last night he presented me with his bride, he said that her name was Victoria. I couldn't help whispering to him when I got a chance: 'Is Victoria cross?' I think Bob was after that."

"All the Canadian boys are gettin' home brides—Ted's not," said a prairie girl. "You know girls, for a long time before he went away Ted wanted me to be engaged to him, but I couldn't make up my mind. It wasn't that I didn't like him, but—well you know Ted's nose girls. It was so big it was absolutely in the way."

Three girls blushed and owned to a close acquaintance with Ted's nose, and in the way.

"But when I knew he was really going to war, I made up my mind that nose of no nose, Ted would know no more no from me, so I became engaged to him. The very first day he was in the trenches he came home with a new nose and oh, girls, he does look handsome. He says himself that he likes his new nose far better than his old one. When his old nose was washed on him he had absolutely no choice in the matter. He had to get his new one. He had seventeen different shapes to choose from and he chose the one he thought I'd like best—pure Grecian. We're going to be married next week and we want you all to come to the wedding."

"What are the chances of boys in the army of occupation marrying German girls?" asked an anxious lookin' girl.

"Not very good, judgin' from this card that Joe sent me, when I wrote asking him that question," answered another girl as she handed out the card. "On it was a picture of a very plump, homely girl in German costume. Across the bottom of the card was written: 'Maid in Germany.'"

One little girl said that they were expecting her brother and her French bride home on the next troop ship. She said her mother was awfully cut up over the boy marrying a charcoal burner's daughter. He had been highly educated and she had expected him to marry into the leisure class but he said by the time he got to France there wasn't any, so he married for love instead.

After the girls had all had their say the President of the Circle rose. I could see plain that she was awful in earnest.

"Now girls," says she, "the war is over and our work of sending comforts to the men overseas is at an end. This closing meeting of the Sewing Circle finds some of us glad and some of us sad—"

"And some of us mad," calls out the stenographer.

"I think I am safe in saying," says the President, "that every girl here is overjoyed that so many of the boys are left to come home, let them bring whom they will with them. Perhaps if we knew just what some of those girls meant to the boys who were sick and lonely over there, we would understand better why the boys married them. One thing is certain. A great deal of their happiness here in Canada depends on the way in which Canadian women treat them. Let it not be said of us that we failed in our duty to the women our boys have chosen. Many of them have chosen wisely and well and surely to choose was their right. I suggest that we turn our Sewing Circle into a Social Circle for the purpose of entertaining our returned soldier friends and their brides."

"And Jim's baby," says the school teacher, as all the girls agreed with an enthusiasm that showed their belief in the old saying: "There's as good fish in the sea as ever was caught."

I think them girls was wise to take it like that. I don't hold with cryin' over split milk—not by no means I don't. I'm for gettin' up and fillin' the jug again. Why my land, there's enough split milk to drown you, and enough split beans to bury you in this world, if you let them.
