An address which was appreciative of his work among them, was read by Miss Alice McGowan, while Bryson Morlock presented them with a handsome reading lamp and leather bound hymnal, on behalf of the two classes. Mr. Morton warmly thanked all for their good wishes and kindness in thus remembering them, after which the young people which included the pastor Rev. Mr. and also Mrs. Whaley, took possession and spent a happy evening with them in music, song, games and contests. The young people had brought along lunch, and by the time this had also been disposed of, it was early morning and the gathering (about 30) dispersed after singing "Auld Lang Syne."

Re Soldiers' Memorials

A Mass Meeting of citizens of Durham and adjacent Townships is called for Monday Evening, 19th May at 8:30 p. m. (new time) to consider the form of Public Memorial to be adopted for the soldiers of this district who gave their lives in the great war.

An urgent necessity exists to make progress in this matter and men and women in the area around Durham and in Durham itself are cordially invited to be present.

Geo. McKechnie, Mayor

Fateful May 22nd!

What will happen on this date? The Peace Conference gave Germany 15 days to consider and sign the great Peace Treaty and these 15 days expire on 22nd May. The nation is squirming over the terms, and mouthing big things, but the chances are they will sign. It is only now that masses of Germans know they have lost the war.

Should they refuse to sign, an advance into Germany may follow and Foch pitch his camp in Berlin.

The Council, or the G. W. V. A., or the Patriotic Society, or all together, should plan for a Demonstration of some kind to celebrate the signing of the pact of Peace, expected next week. The celebrations will be general throughout the Empire. Keep Durham on the map as a loyal town. Council should take the initiative.

Major Jucksch, Lieut. Helwig

Give Vivid Pen Pictures of Army Life and the Methods of the Hun

A hurriedly called meeting under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. was held Sunday evening in Town Hall at the close of church services. Dr. Jamieson who was chairman had heard of the descriptive powers of the two young Hanover soldiers both of German descent, but than whom no more loyal British citizen exists. They had spoken on Sunday evenings elsewhere and finding there was this opportunity to hear them, the Dr got busy and the result was a packed hall, some fine musical contributions and two war addresses from men with first hand knowledge, easily surpassing anything given here before.

Major Jucksch will be remembered here by his two terms clerking in the McKechnie store, both are natives of Hanover, both volunteered, enlisting as lieutenants and by sheer merit rose, Helwig winning the Flying Medal for his work as Flight Lieutenant, the other to rank of Major. Both were commended in despatches and Jucksch won Military Medal with bar for distinguished service.

The massed choirs of the town were on the platform and opened with "O God our help in ages past." Mr Mistle, in town over the week end, was captured to complete once more the male quartette and a duet by Mrs. M. McFadden and Mr Mistle were pleasing numbers.

Mr Helwig spoke first and began by outlining his last flight over the German lines. When about 13000 feet up the engine began "knocking" and the imminent danger of coming down in the German lines suggested he had better "bid him, self good bye." He and his pilot made a brave attempt to reach their lines but failed. They were shot at of course, and they used up what bombs they had with good effect, but they were caught, the pilot badly wounded but he recovered. Helwig little the worse.

Then followed most graphic word pictures of prisoner life in German hands, meagre food, comfortless and cold apartments. He and his pilot were separated and after various transfers to other prisons, he and other British prisoners to the number of 70 were sent to Cologne.

His life here was a thrilling story, every avenue of escape cut off, surrounded with barbed wire, but a daring scheme was broached. A great sheaf of telegraph wires ran over their prison and they determined to use them as a bridge to crawl on them beyond the barbed wire and to liberty. The wires were 100 feet from the ground and one of their number in the darkness of night got on the roof of their prison, got on to the wires and was making progress on the unique bridge when a twist of some kind caused his cap to fall off. It fell in the courtyard near a sentry, whose mystified look was enjoyed by the prisoners furtively watching their comrades from the windows. He looked all round and at last turned a light upward and discovered a man hanging by the heels from the wire. Soon the whole establishment was aroused, a fire truck ladder was secured, a fireman mounted to the rescue and got the man free from the wires, but the ladder snapped in the middle! and down they came on a crowd of people, killing some, the fireman died from injuries, the prisoner was wounded but recovered.

Other incidents he told of equal daring. He described the harsh German treatment to prisoners and made the assertion that no stories of Hun cruelty they had read or heard of was exaggerated but on the contrary the worst could not be told. On the signing of the armistice, he and others were sent down the Rhine to Holland, thence to Hull, England, where among many reunions, was one where a wife ran to fondly embrace her husband, the husband as fondly embraced her, but why so quiet? His tongue had been cut out!!

Mr Jucksch in opening told of an omission Mr Helwig had made through modesty, of honors he had received. He thanked Durham people for many kindnesses by way of gifts and especially for the check of $85 sent to get a Christmas dinner for the boys, which was done and duly appreciated. He told of the pleasure he had in meeting Durham boys: Lieut. Richardson, Mack Saunders, F. McLraith, V. Catton, and "an efficient little chap named Hoy." He took his audience among the sights of London, to Edinburgh where he saw the grand fleet, to Glasgow where he had a taste of submarine life, to Monte Carlo, where he witnessed the gambling, to the Belgian Senate where he heard the Edith Cavell case discussed, and was at an assembly when the King and Queen of Belgium were present.

These were the lighter side of his life. At great length he described some of the scraps he had been in, he seemed to have borne a charmed life, men shot down at his side, bullets whishing through his hair &c.

Most graphically he told of exertions unbelievable almost through mud to the waist, clambering in and out of shell holes the cowardice of the Huns, unless they had a decided advantage, and gave all the preparations for and carrying out of bloody trench raids over no man's land &c.

And our boys came through these horrors, that is some of them, some of them fell, victims of the enemy, now heroes of the empire, and shall we deny to their memory a monument that will mark their devotion to a noble cause: that will satisfy our self-respect in appreciation of what they have done?

Their addresses were punctuated by generous applause and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered them.

God Save the King closed the meeting.

The Forward Movement

Rev. Mr. Cooper, Mr. Forest, preached in the Presbyterian Church here last Sunday on the great "Forward Movement" inaugurated last year by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The object of this movement is to intensify and broaden all the activities of the church so that it may do its full share in making Canada a God-fearing land, not only where ordinances are already established, but in the broad expanse of our West, where foreign populations, not burdened with moral or religious ideas, are pouring in. One striking fact mentioned shows the necessity of this: about 45 per cent of the population of Saskatchewan are of non-English birth. The ideals of many of these people are low, and to elevate them to intelligent citizenship, the help of the church is greatly needed.

The church is making a call for 500 young men for the ministry in the next five years. It also wants 100 young women to volunteer for Deaconess work, and is calling on all for more earnest prayer and devotion, so that there may be during the reconstruction period a real revival of religious life in the individual leading to the much desired revival of activity in church expansion and to a broader "vision" of a Christianized Canada.

His morning address was illustrative of Home Mission activities, in the evening he dealt with the Foreign Mission work of the church in its fields at Trinidad, Central India, Formosa, Korea, Honan, &c, where 15,000,000 heathen were allotted to their care and would receive no Christian teaching if Presbyterian Missionary effort failed.

He gave a charming address to the Sunday School and bible classes in the afternoon urging increased interest in Worship, Study of God's word, and Service.

Intermediate Lacrosse for Durham

At a well attended meeting of lacrosse enthusiasts at the Middaugh House on Wednesday evening, it was decided to enter a team in the intermediate series O. A. L. A., and officers elected. These are President—J. H. Harding Secy Treas—Guy Kearney Manager—Jas McLachlan Executive Committee—P. Gagnon, R. Whitmore, J. F. Irwin, Geo. Burnett. It is somewhat an expensive proposition to equip a team of ten men and three spares nowadays, after several years lapsed, and the President and A. W. H. Lauder were appointed to solicit donations.

There is splendid material now in town for a fast team among former players, and with younger chaps who will make a bid for a place in the line up, Durham will give any opponent a hard argument. We have not definitely learned what other clubs will comprise the district but Hanover and Owen Sound are both certain to be in the game.

The hall was about half filled only for second presentation of the operetta "Yokohama Maid" by the Presbyterian Choir on Tuesday. The audience however, many of whom were from the country, enjoyed the play. The proceeds were nearly $40, which after expenses, will leave the G. W. V. A. with a fair balance on hand.
