People who affect this unnatural style of walk are vain and petty. Their horizon is strictly limited to "looking your room for, Jane?" "Because. actions, but are invariably non-mag- I wants to sleep."

Another walk with which one is tolerably familiar is the springy walk -the walk that is characterized by rather big strides and a kind of bound, as if the walker's sinews were made of india-rubber. If not too pronounced this walk merely indicates an extremely active and optimistic mind-one who sees a very distinct silver lining to every cloud, and is quite sure they can get on in the world. If very much emphasized, however, the walk denotes extreme eccentricity and egotism, and is only met with in cranks and monomaniacs.

Then there is the shuffling walk. The chief characteristic of this walk is sloppiness, and it is invariable associated with people of very untidy habits-people who are very methodical, and often miserly.

It is not infrequently met with in great thinkers, philosophers or scientists, men with marked genius, and who are often abrupt and crotchety in their manners. If very pronounced, indeed, it indicates a degree of eccentricity that verges on downright mad-

Mind Your Step.

Another peculiar walk is that of the long stride with the decided swing of the shoulders. This walk is generally to be seen in authors, actors and artists, and is characteristic of the art world, the man who has ideas of his own, and is quite untrammelled by convention. It denotes independence. and if accompanied by an emphatic planting down of the left foot, a stamp in fact, resolution and determination.

The Tables Turned.

An Irish witness was being examined as to his knowledge of a shooting affair. "Did you see the shot fired?" the magistrate asked. "No, sorr. I only heard it," was the evasive reply. "That evidence is not satisfactory," replied the magistrate, sternly. "Stand down!" The witness turned round to leave the box, and directly his back was turned he laughed derisively. The magistrate, indignant at this contempt of court, called him back, and asked him how he dared to laugh in court. "Did you see me laugh, your honor?" queried the offender. "No, sir, but I heard you," was the irate reply. "That evidence is not satisfactory," said Pat. And this time everybody laughed except the magistrate.

European Farmers Getting Back on Their Feet.

The territory included before the war in Hungary, Bulgaria and Rumania probably will export at least 1,650,000 tons of bread grains from current crops, compared to 3,900,000 tons in average pre-war years.

So far as its production of bread grains is concerned Bulgaria is practically on a pre-war basis and Hungary almost so, but Rumania is still far from complete recovery. The most optimistic claims of Rumania for export this year are 500,000 tons as against 1,700,000 tons of pre-war years. In the wheat-producing region of southern Hungary the acreage planted this year is fully ninety per cent. of the normal pre-war acreage. that part of Rumania occupied by the siderable land was not cultivated this year, while that which was devoted to crops was found in rather poor condition. This came about because the Teutonic armies ravaged the country of much of the work stock and agricultural implements. However, des-

Oxygen For Fliers.

At high levels, such as birdmen nowadays often reach, the air is so thin that the aviator literally "loses his breath." He is in danger of collapse

It was ascertained during the war, about 15 per cent, of the candidates who passed examination for the air service were really unable to fly at altitudes ordinarily requisite in the work they were required to perform.

It was further determined that more than 90 per cent. of them could not en dure flight at extremely high levels. But, on the other hand, certain picked men, perhaps seven or eight out of 100 passed candidates, were able to ascend to the greatest elevations without peril.

To help in solving this important war problem an oxygen apparatus was developed, smaller than the kind used for mine-rescue work, but constructed on much the same principle. Equipped with this contrivance, and carrying a supply of liquid oxygen along with him, the aviator could skim along in safety through the upper reaches of
