Being well informed is largely a matter of reading a good newspaper.

Fig 0 "Hold your own" in conversation with friends and neighbors-in order to know what is going on in the world ontside of your home town, it is essential that you regularly read a daily paper.

For Ontario readers, there is one paper that overshadows all others, in its ability to keep them in readingtouch with the world at large-The Toronto Star.

A paper edited on broad-guage lines, with a way of presenting news that will win your approval by its fairness and its ability to entertain.

Seventeen direct wires bring the news to The Star, twenty-four typesetting machines rush it into print_ Motor trucks rush the editions to the trains; and, ere you go to bed, you have the day's record spread before you in a newspaper so bright and "newsy" that you read with keen relish its every
