

WHEN KING GEORGE PAYS A VISIT

MUCH-SOUGHT HONOR, BUT EXPENSIVE.

An English Hostess Describes How Royal Guests Are Entertained.

It is, of course, a great honor to entertain the King and Queen, says a well-known English hostess, but I can assure you it is also a great anxiety and expense.

Indeed, you want a very long purse to have their Majesties for guests. I know that a Saturday to Monday visit of the King and Queen to the castle of a Scottish duke cost him $25,000, and a four days' visit to a well-known earl reduced his bank balance to the extent of $50,000. You can thus see that hospitality which costs $12,500 a day is a luxury which few can afford.

At certain great houses, where such visits are a tradition, a Royal suite is kept in constant readiness, thus reducing both the expense and the trouble to a minimum. It is, of course, most sumptuously furnished and decorated; but all its splendours are covered and hidden away, except upon the occasion of a Royal visit, which may not come more than once in a dozen years.

In one house I know, the Royal apartments consist of no fewer than twenty rooms, including two most luxurious suites for the King and Queen, each of six rooms, with eight rooms for the use of attendants. And these rooms—a fourth of the whole house—are closed to the owner and his family, and have only been used twice in a score of years.

Naturally, where there is no such provision for Royal guests, the expense of a visit is enormous. A large portion of the house must be set apart for the purpose, rooms redecorated and structurally altered, and new and costly furniture bought. To avoid the least risk to the health of the excited visitors, the house is thoroughly overhauled by sanitary experts, and I have even known the entire drainage system to be reconstructed.

Exercises One's Privilege.
It is a curious and little known fact that whatever house the King visits is, in the eyes of the law, his own property so long as he remains in it. He is actually the host, and his owner is his guest. But this is a position of which no Sovereign would dream of taking advantage; and, as a matter of fact, no one could play the role of guest more gracefully and tactfully than our own Royalties.

The King, however, has one privilege which he usually exercises. He has the right to say whom he prefers to meet under his host's roof. With this object the list of proposed guests is submitted for his approval or amendment before a single invitation is issued.

This list is by no means confined to persons of title. It always includes a few guests who have distinguished themselves in some field of work or other, or who are noted for their social gifts and powers of entertainment. Each guest, too, must understand all the niceties of etiquette to be observed in the company of Royalty.

If the visit is in the shooting season his Majesty, after breakfast in his own apartments, is ready to start by ten o'clock with his fellow guests to the covert; and, after a few busy hours with the guns, the shooting party is joined by the ladies for luncheon, which is usually served in a tent.

If there is no shooting the King rarely leaves his apartments during the morning; indeed, he is often absent from luncheon, so busy is he kept with his correspondence and State duties. He is, however, seldom absent from afternoon tea, when he is prepared to enjoy himself in the company of his fellow guests.

Dining With Royalty.
Of course, all the guests are present at dinner, his Majesty escorting his hostess to the dining-room. During the meal his personal wants are attended to by his own servants, who keep their position behind the Royal chair and receive the various courses from the hands of the servants of the house.

The dinner, which is pleasant and informal, rarely lasts longer than an hour, when the Royal party and guests supplemented by a few local notabilities who have not been among the diners, congregate in the drawing-room for such entertainment as is provided for them. This may take the form of private theatricals, a performance by a London company, a acted band, or some popular entertainers, such as conjurers, thought-readers or singers.

At its conclusion the King and the male guests retire to the smoking room for a final cigar, or to the billiard room for a game and a gossip. In addition to this program there may be such incidents as receiving deputations from local bodies, or an excursion to a neighboring town to inspect some manufacture, or to perform a public ceremony. These, with longer trips to local scenes of interest, are the crowded days until the hour of departure arrives, when the hostess says good-bye to her Royal guests at her door, the host escorting them to the station.

CASCARETS

"They Work while you Sleep"

You're sluggish—slow as molasses! You are bilious, constipated! You feel headachy, full of cold, dizzy, unstrung. Your meals don't fit—breath is bad, skin sallow. Take Cascarets to-night for your liver and bowels and wake up clear, energetic and cheerful. No griping—no inconvenience. Children love Cascarets too. 10, 25, 50 cents.

Full Up.
The village Sunday-school treat was in full swing, and after the games the youngsters all sat down to a rattling good feed.

Little Johnnie, although unaccustomed to such rich fare, had eaten unsparingly as far as both himself and the food were concerned. To be more explicit, he had eaten until he could eat no more.

And now, at the end, he was feeling rather uncomfortable.

"Can I lift you down?" asked a kind old lady.

"Yes, ma'am, you can lift Ol' down," replied Johnnie; "but—and he looked pleadingly up into her eyes—"please don't bend Ol'."

Surnames and Their Origin

MacWILLIAMS
SIMILAR DERIVATIONS—MacDavid, MacAndrews, MacHenry.
RACIAL ORIGIN—Irish plus Norman-French.
SOURCE—A given name.
There is probably more romance and tragedy, and certainly more history, bound up in the surnames of Irish origin than in those which developed in any other country, with the possible exception of Scotland.

Ireland to-day is full of Anglo-Saxon and Norman-French names which families of pure Irish blood were forced by law to assume. Sometimes they simply translated their names into English. At others they adopted those English names which were nearest in sound to their own.

But the shifting nomenclature of Ireland was not a one-sided affair by any means. As MacWilliams stand witness to-day.

Prior to the death of William de Burgo, third earl of Ulster, at the hands of the natives in the year 1333, many Norman-French families had become thoroughly settled, and the English influence predominated in the north of Ireland. But upon De Burgo's death this influence waned so rapidly that these families had no choice but to cast their lot with the Irish, and the family of De Burgo, with many others, abandoned their Norman family names and constructed new ones for themselves after the Irish fashion of using the first name of a revered ancestor with the prefix Hui ('O' in modern spelling), or Mac, to denote descent. Thus the Burgos became "Sons of William" as MacWilliams, and such names as MacDavid, MacAndrews and MacHenry came into being among families which in the course of time have, as the tra-

Superstitious Sense.

Ask the average man if he is superstitious, and he will give a short negative contempt, but—well, he protests too much. He has his little superstitions all right.

We all have, and the more we have the wiser we are! Superstitious hold sense. The superstitious will not walk under a ladder. That's excellent wisdom, really, for thereby they escape the brick that might have dropped on their head, or the spots of paint that would have ruined their clothes, or the bit of lime that would have fallen into their eye and caused them half a day's agony, or worse.

The superstitious will not sit down with thirteen at table. Excellent wisdom again. Thirteen is an odd number. When conversation develops on pair lines, as it generally does, then someone has to be left out—or brought in as a third. Further, if thirteen at table means that one is to die before the year is out, isn't it wiser to live? The cost of dying is as much up as the cost of living.

Then there's the salt-pilling superstition. It's unlucky to spill salt, but the ill luck is cancelled if you throw a handful over your left shoulder. Sound wisdom again. The carpet will have to be swept, for one thing. It probably needs it. Servants are not what they were.

And as all "Home Hints" books put on record, there is nothing like salt to prevent moths getting into a carpet.

Then there's the horse-shoe superstition. Sound sense again! If you pick up a horse-shoe a child cannot fall over it. Nor a tire be punctured with it. And cast horse-shoes, in a good state, are worth money these days.

All superstitions rest on sense. The above are just instances. Test the bulk, and you will find them up to sample.

Too Much for Him.
"I attended a case tried in a western city," says a member of the bar, "where the defendant was charged with burglary. While the judge was delivering his charge to the jury one of the jurymen fainted, just as the judge had impressively said: 'Gentlemen of the jury, in arriving at a decision you must take into consideration the testimony of the witness for the defense and give it full weight.'"

"At the words 'full weight' the jurymen swooned away. He was a coal merchant!"

RICH, RED BLOOD THE GREATEST NEED

Nearly All Ills Are Due to Poor, Watery Blood—How to Improve Its Condition.

To be in a healthy condition the human body requires a constant supply of new, rich blood. Nearly all the ills from which people suffer arise from one cause—poverty of the blood. If the blood is rich and red it absorbs nourishment from the food which passes into the stomach and distributes that nourishment to the brain, nerves, muscles and all the organs of the body. When the blood is weak and poor in quality it cannot do its natural work of feeding the brain and body, and the result is weakness and disease.

Headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, poor digestion, nervousness, pimples and unsightly blotches on the skin, all indicate that the blood has become impure—that it is not doing its appointed work. If this condition is not remedied it will grow worse and worse, and a complete breakdown will eventually occur. To bring about a healthy condition of the blood no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Their one mission is to make new, rich blood, which reaches every part of the body, bringing with it new health and increasing vitality. Thousands have testified to the benefit they have found in the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when run down in health. Among these is Mrs. Bertha Kendall, Darling Avenue, Toronto, who says:—"In the summer of 1918 I was in poor health. My appetite was variable, and I suffered a great deal from nervous headache and palpitation of the heart. A lady friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I used with splendid results, as by the time I had taken six boxes I felt like a new woman. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth their weight in gold to every nervous, sick woman, as they cure quickly and save doctor bills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills may be had from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or 6 boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Old Friends.

Give me my old coat again
That I have worn through many days of rain,
Whose hue is varied, ripened by the sun
To subtle patterns; give me one
Of my old books to read by firelight
Half asleep,
Whose effaced memories leave gaps
Of deep
Conjecture over thoughts that lie in rest
Beneath their placed linen. Let the White hands of silence touch me, and
Let me see
Cool hands of rivers soothing through the night;
Give me my old town again
That I have watched through ghostly
scarves of rain,
Through fringes of pale lights, and
let me see
Her streets that would into my brain
so stealthily
That I hear yb't the chant of them
that roam
Along their blinded spectral corridors.
Give me my old joy and wonder back
again,
The adolescent loveliness of pain;
But let me touch them now; and
know and bless
With this new love and dawning tenderness.

Antiquity of Lotus.

Few flowers have been more identified with the world's history than the mysterious lotus of Egypt. The phrase "lotus eaters" is a common one in literature, and is used to describe those who live in a dream world. The food made from the dried seeds of the Egyptian variety seems to have had an effect similar to various opium products, and once in the clutch of the drug the lotus eaters forgot both past and family, and went about, oblivious of demands made by society; kin or even their own physical wants.

The lotus is closely identified with the ancient Egyptian religion, and was dedicated to Osiris, no Egyptian thinking of approaching a temple without three of the blossoms in his hand. The name was given it, according to mythology, when a beautiful nymph of the same name, heartbroken over the coldness of Hercules, went to Hebe for sympathy, and by her was transformed into a flower.

The Greek hero taking ship shortly afterward with Hylas, a youth he loved as his own son, came to an island where the latter landed and searched for a spring. He found one in the centre of a pool, the pool being covered with beautiful blossoms. As Hylas stared at them, the lotus, in her nymph form, emerged from the blossom and drew him to her arms, and then to the depths of the pool, where he drowned.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS ALWAYS IN THE HOME

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she always keeps a supply on hand, for the first trial convinces her there is nothing to equal them in keeping children well. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion, colds and simple fevers and making teething easier. Concerning them, Mrs. Saluste Pelletier, St. Dumas, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and am never without them in the house. They have always given the greatest satisfaction and I can gladly recommend them to all mothers of little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Perpetual Youth.

Wonderful Sarah Bernhardt! Will she ever grow old? At the age of seventy-five she has written her first novel—not a short one, but a hundred thousand words. Thus she leaves in the shade Sir Walter Scott, who wrote "Waverley" when he was forty-three, and William de Morgan, who scored his success with "Joseph Vance," at the age of sixty-five. Advancing years obviously do not always dim the intellect.

The "Divine Sarah" is perhaps distantly related to that family of veterans who once filled a victor with amazement. Four stalwart "boys" of about one hundred years each, sat down with him to a robust meal, sharing the guest with their vitality. He noticed one empty chair, and asked humorously whether it were their father's.

"No, father's havin' his violin lesson," he was told, "but gran'fer'll be down as soon as he finishes his work."

BITS OF HUMOR FROM HERE & THERE

Only Just.
A Scotchman on his first visit to London, had been warned by his friends to be careful when buying anything, and always to count his change. After making his first purchase he stood counting his change so many times that the shopkeeper, thinking he might have made a mistake, said to him:
"Well, Jock, and is your change all right?"
"Aye," replied Jock, slowly, once again counting it, "but only just."

No Disobedience At All.
"Willie why were you disobedient to your Aunt Jane?"
"I wasn't disobedient, mother."
"Yes, you were. Haven't you been swimming this afternoon?"
"Yes."
"Didn't I hear your Aunt Jane tell you not to go swimming?"
"No; she didn't say that at all. She only came to the door and shouted, 'Willie, I wouldn't go swimming.' And I shouldn't think she would. What would folks think if they saw a woman like Aunt Jane swimming in the creek?"
