Days Are Longer.

Happily for our convenience, the process is extremely slow, but all the same the fact is that the days are getting longer. This does not refer to hours of daylight increasing with the advancing year, but to days as timed by the revolution of the earth on its axis. The earth's power of rotation is growing weaker, and as a result its revolution on its axis is slowing up. Which means, of course, that the day is lengthening.

An epoch must eventually arrive when the day wil be equal in length to the year; that is, to the time it takes for us to revolve about the sun. Then the earth will always turn the same face toward the solar luminary, just as the moon now always turns the same face toward us, and one-half of our planet will have sunshine all the year, while the other half is in total and permanent darkness. That is, if the sun is still shining. It may become a dim and chilly orb before then.
