In The Lime Light

South Grey and South Grey's Member of Parliament were never more in the public eye than at present. Last week Miss McPhail spent two days in North Oxford and no doubt had a share in the great victory there for the Drury government. Sunday last she addressed a labor meeting in Toronto, and this week had a telegram from Winnipeg asking her for a big function there on Jan. 21. All this and her picture appearing in papers from coast to coast and very likely beyond it, is rousing an interest that will have its climax when she takes her place at Ottawa, the first woman representative and from South-East Grey.

It is an epoch in Canadian history and however brilliantly the sex may shine in the future none can withhold the honor of priority from Miss Agnes McPhail, M. P. for South-East Grey.

Mrs Wintington, one of the two lady M. P.'s in the British House of Commons referred felicitously to Miss McPhail's entrance into public life.

Appreciated by Provincial Directors

A feature of the Progressive Convention in Toronto last week was the welcome accorded Miss McPhail, M. P. The address below was read by Mr Aschough of Kenora after being endorsed by the Board of Directors:

To Miss Agnes C. MacPhail, M. P. We, The Directors and Members of the United Farmers of Ontario in annual Meeting assembled in the city of Toronto on the fourteenth day of December, 1921, by these presents tender our most hearty congratulations on your election as member for the House of Commons of Canada, for the Electoral Division of South East Grey by such an overwhelming majority and further congratulate you on being the first and only woman member to be elected to the Dominion Parliament. We feel sure that your manifest ability and straightforward manner in dealing with questions of importance during your connection with the United Farmers Organization will stand you in good stead in your new sphere of activity and we look forward to your active participation in the affairs of the nation.

We are sure that the presence of a woman member will have a beneficial effect and trust it will be the means of further breaking down the age long prejudice against your sex taking part in public affairs.

A Drury Victory

The by-election in North Oxford on Monday last was the first of the kind held by the Drury Gov't, and the Progressive candidate, D. M. Ross, was the victor over his liberal opponent by a majority of 1303. A third candidate calling himself 'Independent Conservative' got a very small vote. Mr Drury takes this vote as an endorsement of his Hydro Radial policy while the Globe stoutly denies this and dares Mr Drury to open Halton for a proper test.

Mr Drury's stand on the radial question has, we believe, the endorsement of nine tenths of the province. With the example of the railway mess in the Dominion area, any statesman who would favor the duplication of lines in this province at the expense of Provincial guarantee, would not be worthy of the name.

Miss Agnes C. McPhail, M. P.

Miss Agnes C. McPhail, M. P., for South-East Grey has the great distinction of having been the first woman to be nominated for the Dominion Parliament and the first to be elected. She was the only one of four women candidates to receive the people's call. Her vote was remarkable, a plurality of 2598. The campaign waged by Miss McPhail was a very vigorous and well organized one. There was, of course, a fine organization of farmer's clubs to provide facilities, but the candidate herself was successful and judicious. Her reputation as a platform speaker was well sustained and aroused much enthusiasm. The ill-judged attempt to stir up religious prejudice against her had quite a contrary effect. It brought her hundreds of votes that would otherwise not have been polled or polled for another candidate.

WELBECK.

Raining and snowing is the latest in our burg.

Quite a number from our vicinity are taking of taking in Latona Box Social next Friday night. I wonder if any of the boxes will bring a ten spot. Bid up boys.

Mr Will Campbell took a trip east lately. We would like to know how the little grey driver liked facing the storm on Sunday evening.

Mr and Mrs Charles Shewell took in the Christmas tree at the Roebuck last Friday evening.

Mr Perious Sher is busy helping Goldsmith Bros. taking out timber.

Mr George Bailey is engaged with Charles Shewell at present. (George is a hustler since the way the election went.

Mr and Mrs Eric Goldsmith visited at Tom Shewella one evening last week.

Miss McPhail had quite a majority at our poll. It must be the wrong season of the year for a Ball game.

ABERDEEN

We have been having all kinds of weather lately. Last Saturday it rained all day and on Sunday we experienced quite a blizzard of wind and snow and one isn't sure whether to take the wheels or runners.

Mr John Lynn went to Owen Sound last week as a juror at the assizes there.

Mr Allan Nickel of Southampton is visiting his sister Mrs John Lynn. The young people on the line have had a busy time practising for the Christmas concerts.

Mr Jas McDonald spent over the week end with friends in Pricerville and Proton.

Mr Robt. Murray of Sullivan visited his aunt Miss Helen Clark one day last week.

A Visit to Oxford and the Shakespeare Country

Miss Edith Edge tells of pleasant Trip taken in mid-term holidays

The following fine descriptive letter from Miss Edith Edge to her home folks in Durham will interest many readers. She is one of the Canadian teachers in London, England schools. During her Christmas holidays she expects to visit France, Belgium and Switzerland, eating Christmas dinner in Paris.

Dear Home Ones: Here I am back to work again after a most delightful holiday. It's horribly wet and dull outside to-day but we were blessed with wonderful weather while away.

Saturday morning we left London from Paddington Stn at 8.45. We reached Oxford about 10.30 and went right to the hotel. We were supposed to stay at the Randolph Hotel but Prince Henry was coming with his attendants so we had to go to the Roebuck and Wilberforce Hotels. Janet and I had a very nice room together.

Miss Burrows, the President of the Home Students and one time head of St. Hilda's, received us and took us to St. Marys church where she showed us the old Convocation Hall and legislature of the early beginnings of the college. The service for the students and professors and chancellor is still held there. It was in that church that Cranmer was preached to, to try and make him recant.

Then we went to the University college and Bodleian library where some professor received us and showed us about. Thos Bodley founded the library in the days of Elizabeth and made arrangements with the publishers union for a first copy of every book published to be given to them. They receive them at the rate of 300 a day and have built large underground libraries to store them. That is the second largest library in the kingdom, the British Museum taking first place.

Then the party went to lunch at one of the large restaurants nearby. It was no common party either as it represented almost every part of the Empire. There were many from Canada, some from Australia, New Zealand, India and S. Africa.

After lunch we went to Merton college one of the oldest, dating from the 12th century. It stands now as it was then with the exception of the floor which was replaced 50 years ago by a hideous marble one, and the seats. We were shown the library there and it contained a few chained books as relics of the past. In the old days it was partitioned off in stalls and in each stall was a bench and shelf for the book. With the introduction of printing, manuscripts lost their value and many were used inshops for binding books. Many of the old manuscripts are being found in the libraries of the colleges in the bindings of the printed books.

As a great honor we were shown through the Fellows Gardens which were very beautiful indeed.

From Merton we went to New College and were met by one of the Professors there. There is a beautiful window in the chapel of New College painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds in yellow and brown. We visited the library, dining hall and chapel. Outside the walls of the old Oxford which are kept in repair by the Universities in accordance with the original agreement with the city corporation.

The Vice-Chancellor of Wadham College had tea for us in the dining hall, and himself addressed us in a speech of welcome. After tea we went to Magdalen College to a choral evening. The singing Mr H. Urstadt, not in light.

afces, they had to put a steel case around it to protect it as it was marked for destruction.

The register of the church shows the entry of his birth and death.

Then we went to lunch at the Shakespeare Gallery Cafe. We (the League) entertained the mayor and alderman. In the evening the order was reversed and they entertained us to tea, after which we all went to the hall above the cafe and had speeches from representatives of different parts of the Empire.

In the afternoon we went to Shakespeare's birthplace. Very little of the furniture used by the family remains. Some of his letters, pictures and his desk at school are on exhibition. In the room where he was born is his bust.

From the cottage we took the path often trod by Shakespeare himself to Anne Hathaway's cottage. It has been preserved just as it was and is extremely interesting. The roof is thatched and the cottage has a cute little garden in front.

In the kitchen and dining room combined is a huge fireplace with little recesses in the wall to dry the tinder. A leather bag with a piece cut out of it hangs near the fire. At one time it was used for beer but when it became worn and began to leak, the piece was used to mend shoes. The oven in the base of the fireplace had a wooden oven door.

In the best room was another huge fireplace with a cupboard in the side for smoked meat, the courting settle and the dishes. Shakespeare and Anne were not allowed to be alone until after they were betrothed, so they used to sit on the courting settle under her mother's watchful eye.

The dishes used were first wooden, then pewter and finally earthenware. They used to turn the wooden ones upside down and eat the pudding from the bottom of the plates.

An old rush light was sitting on the table. If one end of the rush didn't give enough light, they would double it up and burn from both ends—hence the term "burning the candle at both ends."

Upstairs we saw the bedroom with the curtained beds, rush mattresses and the linen embroidered, by Anne's youngest sister.

From the cottage we went to the Hotel Janet and I shared a room named Henry VIII. Every room is named after some character in the plays, I'll send a card of the hotel to let you see how antiquated it looks.

In the evening we were given complimentary tickets to the cinema in the Mem'ral Theatre. It was a very ordinary picture but it was very kind of them to give us the tickets.

Tuesday morning we left at 9.30 for Warwick Castle by char-abanc and before leaving we went to see the old Grammar School where Shakespeare received his early training.

It was raining when we left Stratford but it soon cleared and we enjoyed the drive very much. The leaves are still on the trees, many of them quite green and the grass is still green so the country was beautiful. We saw several large estates with a little cottage at the entrance for the gate keeper, the large mansions of the owner and the cluster of houses of the servants. There were several herds of fawn in the private parks.

Warwick Castle is beautiful. We were shown the chapel, the armouries, the drawing room, music room and a bedroom. The paintings on the walls were very fine, some of them being the work of Van Dyke. The armour belongs to men who died in defence of the castle. In the music room is a pipe organ but the pipes are hidden underneath the floor and in the walls. The view from the windows is glorious. Warwick is on the Avon river and just a short distance away is an old Saxon mill, which has been grinding away for over a 1000 years.

Warwick was one of the last of the ancient fortresses to change into a palace and that is why it is still in good condition. Kenilworth changed about a 100 years earlier and was destroyed by the bombardment at the time of the Civil War.

In the ruin at Kenilworth we saw the old banquetting hall, the dungeons where prisoners were kept and the kitchen. Some of the walls are overgrown with ivy and moss.

From Kenilworth we went to Coventry, one of the oldest towns in England. It has three old churches the spire of St. Michael's being the highest parish church spire in England. I had a notion to climb it for the view but hadn't enough energy. The Guild Hall is a very ancient building which was used for a town hall too.
