home in the forests of Proton and Egremont and carrying their provisions on their shoulders.

But what do we find now. Those sons and grandsons of the dear old pioneers are reaping the fruits of their labor.

An old highlander was wending his way homeward to the vicinity of Hopeville while on his way coming from the town of Durham. Being overtaken by night while going thru the woods at Moss Lake (south of Priceville) he lost his path and was compelled to put up for the night under the shelter of some cedars. Being a short time out from his native land in the highlands and while listening to the croaking of the bull frogs in Moss Lake he was sure it was a pack of wolves that was making for his lonely shelter on a hot July night.

It is seventy one years ago this week since the writer's father, mother and family came to the Durham Rd. Glenelg. N. Egremont and Proton were then solitary wildernesses and even the S. Line, Glenelg was looked upon as a forsaken part of the township.

Perhaps we told the following some time ago but as we are talking of Proton it suits again this time. In the early history of the township it was a hard matter to get a clergyman to perform a marriage ceremony. The late Rev. Alex Stewart of Durham was on his way to perform a marriage in the newly settled Tp. of Proton. Being compelled to leave his horse on the way (if any) on account of bad roads, and being fatigued travelling, he called at a house near by for the purpose of getting something to eat. The good lady of the house was sitting at the fireplace a big pot of potatoes which was all for to feed the family for dinner.

But as it ashamed to show that this was all, she began to hide the pot. But the good servants keen eye viewed the pot, which contained good quality of the old crop variety. He said in his calm manner "Will you please man let me have some of those potatoes." With shame and true liberality the lady gave him a big plateful and after partaking he said it was the best meal he enjoyed for a long time for he got it in time of need. No wonder that the engraving of this saintly servant is to be seen in the window of the Baptist church, Durham. Mr Stewart often preached in the old schoolhouses and log cabins, irrespective of denominational feelings.

Sight-seeing in Paris

Impressions of the Wonderful French Capital by Miss Edith Edge.

Paris, 25th Dec. '21

My Dear Home Folk.— We left London at 10 o'clock, Dec. 23, and arrived in New Haven about 12 o'clock. We immediately embarked on the Dieppe for France after getting our passports examined. The Dieppe is not nearly as large as an ocean liner, consequently it rocked more in the waves. Many of the girls were sick, I among them. It wasn't a rough passage, say the people who have crossed before, but the boat did roll a good bit. We could see the chalk cliffs of England for quite a piece out. We met quite a number of other boats, some bigger but most smaller and some of them were pitching so much that they almost disappeared (the lower part of them) in the trough of the waves.

We arrived at Dieppe about 3 p.m. and then we had to have our baggage examined. Instead of taking the baggage off down a shoot as they did in Liverpool, the men carried it off, four or five bags at a time. We went into the customs office and the man said something to me about my bag. I said 'no' (I've no notion what he said) so he marked it without even looking. The train was right at the landing place. French trains have steps up to the cars like our cars. The interior is arranged like English ones with a long corridor and compartments. We arrived in Paris about 7.15 and came in 3 busses to Hotel Bellevue.

Saturday we had all day to do as we liked. In the morning we went to the Galerie Lafayette, one of the biggest stores in Paris and saw many lovely things. It seemed funny to hear French on every side and at first I found myself wondering how they could understand each other! We went to the Grand Hotel for a walk on the Boulevard. The Parisians celebrate all the night before Xmas and after midnight mass they parade the boulevards, go into the innumerable cafes and have dinner, one course of which is black pudding. We saw some chaps grab a girl and have a kiss all round before they let her free. There were all kinds of side-shows, something like a midway. There were about a dozen of us together so we felt quite safe. After we were in the street and the awfully rattled and they were singing, laughing and yelling.

A booklet from Mrs Ord with her picture in it and a booklet from Dr. Rendall, headmaster of Winchester and president of League, greeted us at the breakfast table. We have very plain breakfasts,—rolls and a cup of tea, coffee or chocolate. Then we went to mass in Notre Dame church. It is a most beautiful big building with wonderful stained glass windows. The priests and cardinals and bishops went through a lot of ceremonies which no doubt mean a great deal to them such as swinging incense, ringing bells, washing hands in holy water, kissing rings, carrying candles, macers, putting on and off hats, etc. The cardinals and bishops wore most gorgeously dressed in gold, embroidered with various orders. The cardinal wore a cute little red skull cap and had a long train of red velvet.

After we had lunch we went to the Louvre. We didn't all go in a body and I had some fun finding the way. I was quite proud of myself when I said to a policeman "Où est la galerie de tableaux?" and his face lit up with understanding. It is a most beautiful building with a lovely garden and walks go in front. It is a nine miles walk to go through the gallery. We went first to see the statuary and saw Venus de Milo and Winged Victory (originally called the Nymphs). We went to the many others. Then we went to the pictures. One we would need days instead of a few hours to look around. Many of a few hours to look around. Many of a few hours to look around. Many of a few hours to look around.

35 Canadians were invited to the High Commissioners for Canada and we drew lots last night to see who would go. This is bed-time now. We had our Xmas dinner to-night—soup, fish, turkey, salad, beans, peas and carrots together, plum pudding with brandy sauce and fruit. After dinner we went to drawing room and sat round and talked. A lady from the British sang for us several times and we sang "The Maple Leaf" "Marsellaise" and a few others. I have had a very happy day.
