When decorating a room the furniture and rugs should be used as a nucleus, as these are very seldom changed. Of course, if the furniture is old and scarred and is not to refinished it would be best to us darker shades, otherwise all the de feets of the furnishings would be shown up.

But it is not necessary to have any scratched and marred furniture when there are so many products on the market to-day which can be bought at a very nominal cost, especially designed to make chairs and tables look new and attractive.

UNIFORMITY IN THE WESTERN SCHOOLS

STANDARDIZED EDUCA. TION IN ALL PROVINCES.

Important Step Toward the Attainment of Unity in Educational Systems of Canada.

It is true in Canada that East East and West is West, and that in a good many respects an imaginary line divides the older and more conservative Eastern Provinces from that new er and more energetic Western terr tory. Whilst instigated by a common loyalty to the Dominion and mutually striving for the same national ends there exists a subtle difference in their modes of action and in the opinion as to the most effective manner of attain ing the objects both are working for, ing of constituting in most respects one territory, united in the manner of their composition, populated by a people with a common lot, moved by the same ideas, actuated by the same tives and impulses because their cir cumstances are similar. For this rea son, and because still being in the moulding process they are more plastic, and find it less difficult to cooperate in matters affecting the good of their own territories and the entire

An example of this has been the standardization of elementary education throughout the West. Education in Canada is a matter of provincial jurisdiction and the various provinces on entering Confederation formulated their own systems and established their own policies. Each of the West ern Provinces, in its own way, moved along what it considered the most progressive lines and, beset by the many difficulties and problems inevitable to a state of evolution and development established systems which made West ern Canadian education second to none on earth.

As a result of a series of education. al conferences between the Depart ments of the four Western Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchwan, Alberta and British Columbia, elementary education is now largely standardized throughout this territory, and as far as teachers, children and their parents are concerned, that vast area west of the Great Lakes to the Pacific constitutes one educational province. In the different provinces the require ments for entry to Normal School have been made the same and the training given in these establishments is largely standardized. The qualifications of the teachers are very similar and consequently their certificates have been adjudged of equal value, so that teachers may move with facility from one province to another. Fur thermore, there is a certain uniformity in text books which is yearly being widened to embrace a wider compass. Nothing has been spared in Western Canada to give the child, particularly the boy and girl of the farm, the utmost education can offer, and it is the proud boast of this territory that not only are the elementary facilities within the reach of every child but a university education within his grasp The Western Canadian provinces, in recognizing they have a common work to perform, have united for the achievement of many objects, and in the standardization of educational ideals have seized a propitious time to band themselves together for a pur pose the enermous benefit of which only the future will fully reveal
