had leaped back to those hateful moments when she had confronted Kempton Ross'aer before Mrs. Alden's safe. She thought of him, as she had seen him then - caught-trapped-found out, branded as a thief! And she thought of Araby, of her wide, candid sweet eyes, the warm friendliness of She felt a little choked. She was conscious, too, of a wonder at herself for not feeling more of contempt for Kempton than she did. Surely he was deserving of it? Surely he was utterly unworthy of a girl like Araby? And yet-yet! She leaned forward, looking down into the street, her hand clenched against the sill. He must have been driven by an extremity of desperation to such a course—even as she had been driven to the course she had taken. He must have suffered in a very madness of despair, as she had done. She choked again. Warm hearted, sensitive, tender toward all who suffered, that vague pity she had felt for Kempton from the beginning leaped to a sudden very real sympathy. How he must have suffered! How he must be suffering still!

She knew comprehension rather than blame for the thing he had done. It was not for her to censure. And then, again, as Araby's face rose before her, she stirred and sighed. He loved Araby! A quick, sharp stab of "By the way, I wonder what has fear, of guilt struck at her heart.

HEAVY TOLL PAID BY OUR FUR-BEARERS

BEAVER PELTS LEAD IN BULK VALUE.

General Decline in Prices Has Lowered Total Value of Annual Pelt Products.

The deflation in the market value of furs is graphically illustrated in a report just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on "Fur Production in Canada in 1920-21." The very high prices which prevailed in 1919-20 resulted in a valution of the fur product of that year of $21,387,-005, whereas, last year the output was valued at but $10,151,594. There was a slight decrease in the number of pelts taken, but market conditions were responsible for much the greater portion of the decrease in value.

In 1920-21 there were 2,936,407 pelts of wild fur-bearing animals taken, against 3,600,000 in 1919-20. Beaver was the principal pelt marketed in bulk value, 164,656 skins accounting for $2,686,472. Muskrat provided 2,015,481 skins valued at $2,505,375, and came second in point of total value. Marten or sable, with 47,292 skins, was third, with a value of $1,081,871, or $22.87 each. Otter. with 10,931 skins, at $24.02 each, and 117,561 mink at $8.23 each, were well represented in the totals. The much maligned skunk, at $1.73 per skin, produced $130,130 for the 74,972 pelts marketed.

High Priced Fox Pelts.

Foxes, with six classifications, are among the higher priced furs. Silver fox, the aristocrat of the fur-bearers, supplied 2,843 pelts, at an average value of $151.99. There were also 121 blue fox at $76.75; 21,416 white fox at $34.62; 3,100 cross fox at $51.09; 18,137 red fox at $11.61, and 60 other fox at $4.22, which accounted for $1,552,232 of the total.

The emine (weasel) provided the second largest number of skins, 386,-034, but at the low price of 49 cents per skin it was not largely represented in the total value of the food production, whereas but 4,866 fisher, at $58.85 per skin, accounted for $286,-
