Reeves Calder and McCuaig Disagree

Meetings of County Council Are Rarely Held Without a Squabble.

Grey County Council do not always sail on smooth seas, and occasionally the squalls are of a severe nature. At the recent sessions of the Council, Reeves Calder and McCuaig of Glenelg figure largely. The Sun-Times has the following to say about it: "Last night's session of the County Council was only interesting as a verbal brawl and it seems as though that body cannot meet without personalities being bandied about. In a discussion over the Good Roads Committee report there was a clause that suggested the removal of the road making gang to some other part of the county when the boundary of Glenelg was reached. The reeve of Glenelg, Archie McCuaig, a hard-headed Scotchman, asked Mr Calder if that clause had been put in by Calder or by the committee. Mr Calder refused to recognize the question unless Mr McCuaig would apologize for statements made at a previous meeting and proceeded to tell of the latter's opposition to the good roads scheme, when it was instituted, claiming that Mr McCuaig was still opposed and had been defeated in his township because of that opposition. Mr McCuaig was not one of those to stand any such talk. From Mr Calder, and he went after the reeve of Durham hard. The affair ended with the question put by Mr McCuaig still remaining unanswered and the clause was adopted in the report.

Miss McPhail Misreported

The letter below puts Miss McPhail right before our readers. We regret our report represented her as unwilling to vote on the Budget, it was on the Drayton amendment that her vote and that of seven or eight others was challenged. To vote against the budget as will be seen by her letter, was easy and pleasant.

Ottawa, June 20th 1922

Dear Editor: I read with amazement in the Durham Review: "She (myself) and some of the Progressives did not want to vote at all on the Budget, but a law compels every member to vote unless paired and her vote went against the Budget." That statement is absolutely untrue. I never looked forward with as great pleasure to the casting of any vote.

The Budget made some slight reductions in the tariff, but increased the Sales Tax fifty per cent. It entirely failed to live up to the Liberal platform of 1919 which, by the way, was largely a copy of ours. When questioned by Progressives as to whether the next year further reductions would be made, the Government gave skillful evasions. Then came Sir Lester B. Pearson's speech of high protection without any apology and Mr. Fielding's declaration that he never had believed in the tariff plank of the Liberal platform of 1919.

Our amendment was thrown out so that just Sir Henry Drayton's amendment which recited much of the Liberal platform, said the Liberals had failed to put their platform into law, and concluded with these words: "That the making of such solemn pledges, the utilization of them to secure support, and their flagrant violation after the attainment of office, reveal a disregard of political honour and tend to lower the standard of public life.

The Conservatives were evidently not sincere in their scolding of the Government because the Budget was such as they would have brought down, but their amendment contained the truth. The two votes were separate and distinct. First came the vote on the amendment, when nine or ten of us did not vote until our vote was challenged and then I voted for the Amendment because it contained the truth and I could not vote against it although I believed its movers to be insincere. Then came the vote on the Budget and with great pleasure I cast my vote against it. Of what use would it be to talk against high tariff in a campaign and then vote for it when elected?

Yours very truly, Agnes C. MacPhail

Assassins Love a Shining Mark

Two notable assassinations have taken place during the week. Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, at the head of Ulster defence forces was shot as he alighted at his doorsteps in London one day lately, by two men, agents no doubt of the Irish Republican party who are guided by Valera. Intense indignation has been aroused and stern measures will be taken to suppress the murderous spirit existing. The two men were captured red-handed. Wilson is buried in Westminster Abbey, an impressive military funeral, fellow Generals were pall bearers and Marshal Foch of France was also there.

The other victim was Dr. Walter Rathenau, German Foreign Minister shot down as he was leaving his residence, but his assassins have escaped. He was an active figure at the Genoa Conference and one of the brainiest men of Germany.

Welbeck school section picniced in Mrs Stewart's maple bush on Saturday afternoon. The attractions were a short programme including the pupis flag drill, amusing races, a booth for the painless extraction of cash from wadded wallets, a basketball game between the Welbeck Wideawakes and the Dornoch team which could not be called by way of contrast the Dornoch Dormants for they walloped us well) and not least the picnic lunch. Miss Gillespie, to whom the credit of this enjoyable community affair is due, was presented with a camera by her pupils before leaving the school and incidentally the profession.

Farewell to Miss Gillespie

At their picnic on Saturday, June 24th, the children of Welbeck school presented their teacher, Miss Catherine Gillespie, of Mt. Forest, with a camera. The presentation was made by Muriel Heft and the following address, read by Jessie Ledingham, expresses sentiments echoed by the parents of the section as well as many other warm friends this charming young lady has made in the community.

Dear Miss Gillespie: We have come joyfully to your picnic but we realize that it is going to be no picnic to us to say good-bye to you. During the few short months you have been our teacher you have become very dear to us, and with more reason than Herrick over his daffodils "We weep to see you haste away so soon."

In school-room practise you have followed both the admonitions, "Rule by love, O Hiawatha!" and "Rule by patience, Laughing Water!" besides your superior academic and professional qualifications, your gentle voice and sympathetic ways have made you a most efficient guide to us in the ways of knowledge. Moreover you have been a cheerful comrade and in all our play a good sport in the most complimentary meanings of that expressive term. We are much indebted to you for the organization of our community baseball.

In memory we shall retain pleasant pictures of you and we ask you to accept this camera that you may carry away pictures of Welbeck, "Lest you forget." We hope our fragrant swamps out sweeping views of wooded hills and our clear streams maybe among the pleasant places of your remembrance and that you will also remember that the stoniness of our fences and fields bears no relation to the condition of our hearts. Most of all we should like you to take with you a vision of a little circle of children's faces that have looked up to you with love, respect and happy confidence.

As you leave us amid the falling of "petals of blown roses on the grass" we would gladly, if we could strew with roses your new path of life even to the end. Then beyond the greater river Styx we hope earnestly to meet you among immortal flowers.

With sincere wishes for your complete and abiding happiness. Signed on behalf of Welbeck school, Muriel Heft, Jessie Ledingham, Cameron Corlett, Lucille Sharp
