Possibilities of the Yak.

The whole experiment offers great promise to Canada that her arctic prairies, the forest lands and the great range not so far north will in the future produce great quantities of beef at little cost to the people. The buffalo of North America (the bison) carries a very high percentage of beef upon the back, the most valuable part of the carcass, and the inheritance of this quality is noticeably present in the hybrid and cattalo. Samples of the meat of a fully matured cattalo bull were recently sent out as a test to twenty-five householders by the Parks Board, accompanied by ordinary beef. Fifteen declared in favor of the Recently there arrived at Wainwright Park a strange alien animal, a yak bull from the chill and windy plaleau of Central Asia. The 6,000 mile trip left the animal in good condition; and it came to a region much similar in climate to its own. The yak is the zoologically connecting link between buffalo and domestic cattle, and mates readily with cattle, so it is hoped will also with the buffalo. Thus it is hoped to evolve another type in the near future, or types. The yak is a hardy ranger, equal if not superior to the buffalo. It is distinguished by its long hair and horselike tail. Usually black in color, some are brown, or white. It will stand the most extreme cold and is remarkably free from disease. The meat is of finer grain than that of cat-
