"Playing Politics"

Rev. A. R. McRae, of Glen Morris in a letter to the Globe last Friday severely censures that paper for its attitude towards provincial issues especially where connected with Premier Drury. Mr McRae is a born Liberal, Liberal still, but likes fair play and straight forwardness. He accuses the Globe of playing politics on the Radical question some time ago, and now it is playing politics again by trying to discredit Drury's gambling legislation.

The gambling tax is no more an encouragement to gambling as insinuated by the Globe, than is a magistrate's fine for robbery an encouragement to robbery. If Drury had the power we believe he would make short shrift of gambling, but the Globe and most people know that the control of gambling rests with the Dominion government and while this is the case, Drury can't be blamed for taxing the enormous wins for the public purse. It would appear that this legislation is restraining gambling for McBride of Brantford predicts that Ontario legislation will result in closing many if not all tracks. Fully 90 per cent of the Province would not be sorry if it did.

The Globe is a great paper, commendable in its enterprise and has been a force for good in Canada, but it was untrue to itself and its record when in giving the news of a Drury speech last week it used a "Playing Politics" heading. The heading was "Drury opposes facing election before he must." There had been rumors that a Provincial election might be held this fall, and Mr Drury in his speech put the quietus on the rumor pointing out that his government's policy was and always had been to run its course, (unless defeated in the House.) The objection to the heading lies in the implication that Drury was afraid to "face" an election in the meantime time enough when he "must". We have no doubt some of Mr Drury's followers, still imbued with the old party feeling would have liked an election proving by and following the farmer victory in Manitoba, but Mr Drury we believe is above the partisan practice. The closing paragraph from Mr McRae's letter follows:

"You are only playing "politics" in the cheapest sense when you howl at Drury and never touch King or Dewar and the miserable bunch that stand behind him in their opposition to everything decent Drury does attempt. King, I believe would respond if pressure were brought to bear on him, Dewar and his bunch are hopeless. Yet he is the big man in the Ontario Liberal party.

Until you get something more decent in the Ontario Liberal Opposition it does seem to me you would show your morals to better advantage in encouraging Drury rather than hitting him on every possible occasion. I wish you well, not ill. I merely write this because I am firmly convinced that you are losing your hold on the best citizens of our Province just because they feel you are playing "politics."

The Roseborough Picnic

A most enjoyable reunion picnic was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr and Mrs Ernest Roseborough near Durham when between twenty-five and thirty relatives met, just the sons and wives, daughters and husbands and grandchildren of Mr and Mrs Roseborough of Owen Sound North who had gathered and held their annual family picnic. The day and place was ideal and one of the best picnics yet held by the family, took place. Games and sports of all kinds were enjoyed and delicious refreshments were served. Guests were present from Toronto, Shallow Lake, Shoultice, Owen Sound and Sarawak. All motored back to their home in the late evening, satisfied that a day had been well spent.

Inquest re McClyment Death

The resumed inquest into the death of Robert McClyment who dropped dead on Tuesday morning last opened at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning over the store of McIntosh & Dargavel at Dornoch. The jury are Wm. Smith, Wm. O'Meara, Dan O'Mara, S. McGillivray, H. Trafford, B. Dargavel, T. Mannerow, Wm Smith.

Although a great deal of interest is manifested in the case only a few were present outside the witness and jury. Crown Attorney T. H. Dyer led off the interests of the crown, and Dr Hutson presided as coroner. None of the principal witnesses had arrived at 10 o'clock. The evidence of Thomas Knight, County Constable, was taken. He told of summoning the jury, and of viewing the remains of the deceased. He said that Braun (the son-in-law) had told him that he (Braun) and McClyment and Mrs Braun were hitching up to haul in hay when they noticed McClyment stagger and fall. He died immediately.

Dr. Smith of Durham, who made the post mortem examination, said he had made an autopsy on the evening of the 25th. The deceased was 56 years of age, 6 ft. 2 in. in height. There were no scars except a bruise over the left eye. It appeared to be very slight and he was quite satisfied that this did not cause his death. There was no other external injury and all the other organs were in normal condition, except a large blood vessel over the heart and the heart itself which was slightly enlarged. The blood vessel had been ruptured and a clot of blood lodged in the heart. Before his death McClyment was in such a condition that lifting a heavy weight or excitement without physical strain would cause instantaneous death. The vessel would not rupture without some mental or physical strain. A heated argument or quarrel might cause death.

Mrs McClyment was next called. The morning of her husband's death her husband had grumbled about his heart being weak. Sometimes husband and Braun were some times friendly and sometimes not. There had been no disagreement between the two immediately before her husband's death, but there was trouble a couple of years ago, when Braun struck McClyment with a lantern, inflicting a wound which necessitated attention by a doctor.

Mrs Roy Braun, daughter of the deceased told of the quarrel of two years ago. Both men got up in the night and came down stairs. They met in the kitchen and had some words. Her father put his hand on Braun, who struck him with the lantern he was carrying inflicting a serious wound. She did not appear to know the cause of the quarrel. She then described minutely the details of her father's death.—Sun Times.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury declared death was due to natural causes. This was based on the post mortem examination of Dr. Smith which revealed a weakness in the aorta, the great artery that carries the blood from the heart. No weight was attached by the jury to stories of differences between deceased and Braun, which had been ephemeral affairs.
