Sport Costing Too Much

At the Listowel Athletic Association annual meeting it was found that they went behind in sports last year. Hockey fell behind about $500, football about $500 and baseball about $1600. The outstanding liabilities of the Association are yet about $12,000.

That is a bad record, but is it merely illustrative of the conditions which face almost every sport club or association in the country. Admission charges to sport events are about double what they need to be and are as high as "the traffic will stand."

The trouble is with the expenses. Hockey sticks, balls, bats, gloves, suits and travel and hotel bills come high. This accounts for the losses, not only in Listowel, but in almost every town where sports are held.

This is the outcome of the sort of semi-professionalism, which has crept into sport in recent years. Players no longer regard themselves as in the team for their own benefit and enjoyment. They have come to think that they are doing the public a service by playing, and if they are not paid for their services, they certainly must have all expenses paid.

"Anything to win" is at the bottom of the trouble. A player sees that the manager is anxious to have him, others too, are anxious to have him and he puts a price on his services. He becomes a hired entertainer whether there is a direct bargain to that effect or not. This sets up a juggling between managers for the good player and frequently a team is gotten together which in a very small sense represents the town from which it gets its name. In this sort of competition the big town easily outbids the smaller one. It is a matter of which can put up the most money.

United States financial papers attribute the upward tendency of prices to the shortage of labor. They point out that in many trades there are not sufficient men to operate plants at full capacity, which means higher costs of production. There is also reported to be a shortage of railway labor.

Whether all this is real prosperity or just an imitation remains to be seen. Though the majority of those writing on the subject are of the opinion that it is a case of undue imitation, and that sooner or later the bubble will burst.

Saturday last at noon, Mr Bothwell James Keenan, Chairman of the reforestation committee of the Owen Sound Board of Trade, Mr Arthur E. Richardson of the Ontario Dept. of Lands and Forests and Mr T. S. Cooper, the Agricultural representative for Grey Co., held a conference on Reforestation. All four men were most enthusiastic in the matter.

Mr Richardson explained how the Department which he represented, was willing to assist in the matter. The Department does reforestation in three ways, mainly:

Individual farmers may, by application to the Department, secure enough trees each year to plant two acres. The trees are planted about 6 feet apart and this makes about 1216 trees per acre. These trees are supplied free of charge for 5 years. The only cost to the farmer is the express. Of course the farmers must plant the trees himself.

The Dept. will co-operate with Township Councils in forming demonstration plots. The Council must secure a piece of land 5 to 25 acres suitable for trees near a road, where it can be seen. The trees are supplied by the Department and men are sent to superintend the planting. The only cost to the Council is buying the land and fencing it.

The third method is by co-operation with County Councils and to illustrate this Mr Richardson described the work which had been done in Simcoe Co. In that County there is a large amount of land suitable for the work and the Council secured a piece of land one thousand acres in area in one solid block; this was turned over to the department and last spring the work of planting began. A foreman was put in charge of the work. He lives in a house in the reforestation area. It is expected that the whole 1000 acres will be planted in 5 years. Last year 50 acres were planted and it is hoped that 200 will be planted this year. Scotch, Norway and white pine seedlings one foot high are secured from the Government nurseries at St Williams, Norfolk Co. This nursery turned out fourteen million trees last year. Two other nurseries have been recently installed. The cost of planting the trees varies from $10 to $15 per acre.

Mr Keenan stated that before anything could be done successfully, an educational campaign must be carried on. The people of the county and the members of the Council themselves must be educated to the immediate necessity for reforestation. He is securing data on reforestation and this is being sent to the members of the County Council so that they will be prepared to deal with the matter when it is placed before them in June. Mr Richardson said he would be glad to come up in June and lay the whole matter before the County Council and show them a set of lantern slides which have been prepared. A complete report on the matter with suggestions for action is to be presented by the County Council Committee.—Sun-Times

THE DURHAM REVIEW

Our school reopened on Monday with quite a number of little folks added to the roll.

Quite a few in the neighborhood are making maple syrup.

Sorry Mr D. Hamilton is not improving as much as his many friends would like to see him.

Mr and Mrs Geo. Noble, north of Durham, visited her parents, Mr and Mrs. Alexander.

Mrs Sam Patterson has been attending to her mother in Durham, Mrs Hepburn, who has been seriously ill.

Mrs McPherson of Toronto was a recent visitor with her sisters, Mrs. McCann and Miss McLean.

Master Carman Noble of town, spent a few days with his cousin, Albie McGinn.

The Drury Govt's success in Redistributing this session, it will prove beyond all peradventure its political courage and its entire disregard for party political advantage. Undoubtedly such a move means the sacrifice of a few rural seats to a preponderant urban majority, and yet the Government will probably say in the face of that: we don't care anything about the political phase of it or what other parties might do under similar conditions; we regard Distribution of the electoral divisions a duty incumbent on the Government; the rest we will leave for the people to decide.

Progressive Elected.

The election at Moose Jaw Tuesday between a Liberal and a Progressive aroused much interest, and reporters show the Progressive elected by a safe majority. The last member of a Progressive, was unseated owing to a technicality and would not run again. Moose Jaw city gave a great majority for the Liberal, but country districts seem firm in their Progressive faith.
