

With the Press Party to the Maritime Provinces

Moncton

After an all night ride, we were brought to Moncton at 7 a.m. Saturday, June 23rd and the energy of some of its citizens is amazing, as witness the fact that some of Moncton's young ladies were playing tennis near the station at that hour. At 8 a.m. we left the steam passenger cars to enter machine passenger cars and were first conducted on a trip throughout the city. To a casual observer as we were, Moncton has the "edge" on many of the cities visited for trees, lawns and general cleanliness. And after all first impressions are lasting.

With its population of 18,000 and with its suburbs, nearly 25,000, Moncton is the second largest city in N. Brunswick and is steadily growing in importance. Its a manufacturing city of some importance, the annual output of its factories having, according to latest statistics, an annual value of over $7,500,000. The town is fortunate in having cheap power in the natural gas which is piped there from wells in Albert Co. where there also extensive oil shales, in the development of which British capital is taking a keen interest. Moncton is well built, has modern stores, many imposing buildings and fine residences, while its hotel accommodations is a credit to the city. The town has many attractions for tourists and the most unique is the famous "bore" or tidal wave that twice a day comes tumbling up the Petitcodiac river to a height of 4 to 5 feet.

We were also taken out to the city's summer resort at Point du Chene on the Northumberland Strait and where we revelled in lobster and ginger ale. The city fathers thought a picnic style luncheon would be an agreeable change to the Press people and the "help yourself" affair it was, certainly proved to be the case. Lobsters were there a plenty and before the party left the resort, mere skeletons were floating round. At 1 p.m. we were due to leave for Newcastle and the Moncton city band saw that we left under their musical influence.

Eastern Shore Towns

Newcastle has a population of 3500 and the town is situated on the north shore of the Miramichi River, at a point where the latter is practically an arm of the sea. It is one of the oldest towns in the district and once has been completely wiped out of existence by fire. Near the depot are the huge towers of a wireless station which was during the war under control of the Government.

Our chauffeur, who by the way was mayor of the town, and we should judge not a day older than 25, kindly took us along the river shore road to Chatham and which ranks next to St.

John as a shipping port of New Brunswick.

We entrained again at Newcastle and though not on our program, a stop was made at Bathurst. This stop was also a surprise to Manager Sayles for here, with Mrs. Sayles, they were the recipients from the Press people of a handsome silver pitcher and candelabra. Mr. Sayles was not put off his guard however and he rose to the occasion admirably. Mr. Lorne Eedy, 1st Vice Pres. introduced the subject and referred to the tremendous amount of work that is necessary in arranging for every detail in a trip of this nature.

Off again for Campbellton, along the north shore line of N. B. The civic authorities of the town had planned for the party to see their wonderful town, but we were already overdue, and the latitude we received was a small half hour. The scenery here is entrancing one feature of which is the background formed by Sugar Loaf Mountain, 2000 feet in height, from whose top a glorious view is obtained of the surrounding country, while almost directly across the river, in the Prov. of Quebec, is Mission or Cross Point, noted for its Indian reservation of 500 Miamees.

After a run of 13 miles from Campbellton, passing en route through the interesting tunnel at Morrissey Rock, Matapedia in the Province of Quebec is reached. Matapedia is famous as the point where the rivers Restigouche and Matapedia join their respective waters as they flow onward into the Bay of Chaleur. Darkness closed in and we were to miss the run through Lower Quebec. During the afternoon hearing Campbellton, huge clouds of smoke were rolling skywards evidence of the disastrous forest fires in that province and burning much of the wealth of the province with its valuable timber. Shortly after leaving Chatham, our train slowed up somewhat to view the work of a previous train crew—clearing off the track from a caterpillar plague that held up that certain train for three hours.

Quebec City

On awakening in Levis, Quebec, we were alert and up early, to make the most of our last day, and under such historic surroundings. At 9 a.m. we boarded a steamer that was to take us down the St. Lawrence to the huge cantilever bridge and back into Quebec. The shore line of the St. Lawrence is rugged and fairly "talks" history, and a curious blending of the old and new world is noted wherever one travels.

Standing as she does, perched on a rock and scattered up a cliff, Quebec occupies a position remarkable among the cities of America. She might be described as the Spirit of the Romance in an unromantic age. Much of it is due, of course, to the fact that Quebec was the birthplace of N. America. She was already established among the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth Rock. She has grown old so gracefully and gradually that she has not found it necessary to obliterate the successive stages of her growth. Side by side with the development of modern commerce and a modern outlook, she has kept beautiful massive buildings that were the characteristics of an older day when men built both massively and beautifully.

Our luncheon at the Chateau Frontenac by the C.P.R. was worthy of that great corporation. Here the newly elected President of the Association, J. L. Fortin, of Beauceville, Quebec, joined the party and in a graceful speech, first in French and followed in English, extended a welcome to the party on entering his native Province. This address breathed sentiments full of good will to his English press brethren and we regret space forbids quoting it in full. The small section we are quoting serves to show his spirit, and this was exemplified in all the French element of the Press party: "This trip is not only a pleasure trip, but a trip during which we intend to study, to study, to consult, and to clash our opinions, with the aim of strengthening, if possible, our loyalty towards the Empire; but always keeping in full view the affirmation of our federated autonomy. It is for this, I am sure that we have given life to that vast project. Following the luncheon, a reception at "Spencerwood" the home of the Lieut. Governor and Mrs. Fitzpatrick, was on the program, but our time being short, we desired to make the most of it, by seeing the best vantage point of the city. So with Dr. Farquhar as guide, we went to the island, from which a wonderful sweep of land and water lies ahead of you.

Our special was due to leave at 4 p.m. and loath as we were to leave, our time came to an end, and at this hour saw the party on board, en route for Ontario's capital city where we were to make connections Monday a.m. for our respective Ontario homes.

Summing our trip up briefly, (for our space is now overtaxed), it was an eye-opener to each and all of the party and has left indelible impressions on the minds and hearts—the "mind" for the extent of the basic wealth of the Maritime Provinces and "heart" for the warmth and hospitality tendered to us by their people.

There is much left unsaid that we would have liked to embody in this series of articles, but if the readers of them have found a new conception of what the Maritime Provinces play in Canada's destiny, their mission will have been accomplished.

THE IRELAND TRAGEDY

(The author of the following verses has given a lasting pathetic touch to the fire near Dornoch a few weeks ago, by which Mr. A. Ireland, blind and helpless, lost his devoted wife, who died as a result of her heroic efforts. Mrs. Hendry saw the incident and her poetic nature has embalmed it in verse. —E.D.)

On a peaceful, beautiful morn
Where Nature did freely abound,
Both meadow and field were green,
With verdure did yield,
A tragedy awful was born,
Like a thunderous "bolt from the blue"
Almost before the sweet dew
Had risen to air
O'er the country so fair,
Came the flames that could not be subdued,
Here lived two creatures of fate,
The flames they did scatter when too late
One was helpless and blind,
One unselfish and kind,
They were both in a pitiful state,
The mother, the faithful and good,
Was anxious to save what she could,
She battled the flame
Again and again
And lingered more than she should,
Kind friends gathered quickly around
When they heard the alarming sound
Of the mold-board's whang
As it rang and rang
Where the poor blind man held his ground,
But their efforts were nearly too late
To save his poor faithful life-mate
On a mattress they laid her
And easy they made her,
But she's gone through the golden gate,
In tender unselfishness
Her blind life-mate she did bless
She said, "Don't cry,
The Lord, He is nigh,"
Such a glorious trustfulness!

A lesson I learned while there
Of a faith that's beyond compare:
Herself she forgot
While at lot her thought
Was for him who had been her chief care,
Not long did she have to wait
To reach her heavenly state,
No murmur of pain
She was conscious and sane
Her courage I'm proud to relate,
Let us practise her faith each day,
And when sorrow comes rolling our way
Like the sweet humble soul
We will go to our goal,
Trusting still in our Heavenly Stay,
—Phoebe Hendry,

THE LAST OF HIS NAME

The funeral of the late William Carradice, whose death was recorded two weeks ago, took place from Boston church, four miles from Milton. His remains were accompanied on the sad journey from Durham to his old home, by his sister, Mrs. Donald Campbell and her daughter, Mrs. Mills. They were met by many kind friends and the service in Boston Ch. Carradice and Thomas and Elizabeth Stralighton Chisholm, all pioneers of the living and respect for the dead. Rev. J. R. McDermid, pastor of the church, conducted the funeral service in the church, preaching an earnest discourse on the text "Be ye also ready." Beautiful flowers were contributed there to add to the wreaths that already covered the coffin. The interment took place in the churchyard, where not only the parents of the deceased and eight brothers and sisters are laid to rest, but also his grandparents, David and Jane Elliot Stralighton Chisholm, all pioneers of Halton County.
