British Treasury Discards the Historic Quill Pen

A despatch from London says:--Quill pens are at last succumbing to the march of progress here, as the Treasury has decided to dispense with them in Southwark County Court, almost their last stronghold. One of the chief reasons for their passing is that few workmen know the art of their manufacture.

Philip Cooper, head of the London firm whose predecessors supplied his Majesty's stationery office with quills for about 100 years, predicts that the industry will be extinct in a few years. As the decades have passed, it is stated, parents are more and more declining to apprentice their sons to this trade, believing that the resources of invention would doom it.
