A DAY'S VACATION

No farm family can afford regard the matter of a day's vacation now and then for all the members of the family. A day's recreation is especially important where young folks make up a considerable part of the home. Regardless of the usual pressure of farm operations it is possible during the "slack" periods of the summer to arrange for a day's outing for the family in some shady grove or at some other place of general

If an auto is available, as it is on most farms, you can visit one or other of the more distant places of interest. Sometimes several neighboring families can join together in a sort of a community pienic. Should many families participate, there should be some lively games which will provide the neded social contact of those present.

The suggestion for a day's vacation may be met with the argument that time can not be taken from farm work. To this argument, Dr. Mc-Keever, in his "Farm Boys and Girls," would answer, "Work on the farm, while always pressing, is never done, and when the farm family needs a vacation it should get it."

Boys and girls, as well as their mothers, are a splendid help on the farm. Indeed, they are partners in the farm business. The value of their efforts can not be estimated satisfactorily to all concerned in the terms of dollars and cents. Nor, can they be expected to do their best when the daily tasks on the farm have become a round of monotony and drudgery. Provide for them a day's outing occasionally and the situation changes. They will work at their tasks with a different attitude and a more hopeful outlook on farm life as a whole.

Ir connection with any outing two factors should be kept in mind: 1. Where may we go that all may receive the maximum of benefits and enjoyment from the time spent? 2. How long shall we stay?

All members of the family may well have a voice in settling these questions, especially the question of where to go. Enjoyment for the young arrangements could be made, no doubt, folks, as well as for the parents, with automobile service stations for should be the object sought. Benefits saving the drainings from cars which to the farmer from closer touch with

Time spent away from the farm should end when it is no longer wholesome, inspiring and refreshing.

British Market Cattle Requirements.

An experiment in shipping chilled meat to Britain, conducted by the Federal Department of Agriculture, has led to the conclusion that, all things considered, it is more profitable to ship store cattle or fat cattle for immediate slaughter than to kill in Canada and ship the meat chilled. Evidence seems to show that the most remunerative method is to ship such cattle as fit requirements for sale as to size, weight and finish, will meet a steers weighing from a thousand to twelve hundred and fifty pounds, live weight, best fill the requirements for
