But the years are passing by all the same and every one that passes, has its own story to tell. But we must observe the coming of the New Year 1924 and the passing of 1923 and notice as it were the change, for from the east the winds doth blow, mixed with rain, sleet and snow. It drives the old year right ahead, to be buried deep with kindred dead. But the New Year comes with joyful news to many a home and may sing the new year song: "I come with joy to greet you, I come, I come, with song to you." We give a backward look at the year which was buried yesterday with the thousands of its predecessors and we can faintly recall the many events that transpired during its existence.
