STORIES OF WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

Another Kipling Book.

Mr. Rudyard Kipling has delighted the world of Boy Scouts, not to mention Girl Guides, by his latest addition to the bookshelves—"Land and Sea Tales for Scouts and Guides." The book contains so much for grown-ups as well, however, that the little Boy Scout and the little Girl Guide will usually have to wait while their parents have first dip.

Many people cannot understand why Mr. Kipling is not one of our knights. But the person who is most anxious for him to receive this honor is, I am told, the Meanest Man in the World.

Here's a delightful story, told by the Australian Premier, Mr. Bruce. Before beginning, it's as well to mention that Australia is just larger than the United States. Not many people realize that.

An American, says Mr. Bruce, was boasting about the size of his country to a man from "down under."

"There's a ranch in my country," said the American, "so big that the owner got on his horse one Monday morning, and, having gone the round of the boundary fence, returned on the following Saturday night."

"Why, that's nothing," retorted the Australian. "In my country there are dairy farms where we send newly married couples out to milk the cows, and their kiddies bring in the milk!"

The Helpful Waiter. A cynic once said that old politicians were the best, because as they grew older they told more stories outside the House and fewer inside.

Getting in First Licks. A good many nations have been known to justify their own aggression upon their neighbors much as a little girl named Katherine explained her treatment of her sister Margaret.

"Katherine," he said, "did you hit Margaret with that stick?" Katherine defiantly confessed her guilt.

More Light. The average amount of light obtained for 1 cent from incandescent electric lamps at first was about five candle power hours, but it is now possible to obtain with the ordinary forty-watt lamp 170 candle power hours for one cent.

Her Namesake. When Mrs. Tullard heard that the baby of her former cook had been named for her, she bought a suitable rattle with many jingling bells and went to see her namesake.

Envy of Sir Isaac. The teacher was trying to impress on the children how important had been the discovery of the law of gravitation.

A Seasonable Frosting. A simple icing for little cakes is made by adding strawberry juice to powdered sugar and beating until smooth.

No one should give advice unasked—it is seldom taken and invariably resented.

Happiness comes not from increasing possessions, but from curtailing the desire for possessions.—Mr. A. Hopkinson, M.P.

Surnames and Their Origin

LEACHE Variations—Leeche, Leechman, Leach, Barbour. Racial Origin—English. Source—An occupation.

Had the words "doctor" or "physician" been in use about the eleventh and thirteenth centuries in England, as they are to-day, such family names as Leache, Leech and Leachman would not exist.

At the period when family names were being formed there were no physicians except the barbers, and the principal method of treating nearly all diseases was to bleed the patient with a leech, a little blood-sucking worm.

A large factor in settling these old trade names into family names was the fact that children so often followed the same occupations as their parents, though in many cases the descriptive name would stick to a son even when he did not follow his father's calling, simply through the sheer necessity of his having more than one name at a time when populations were growing so fast that each man could not have a distinctive given name. KELLY. Variations—O'Kelly, Keely. Racial Origin—Irish. Source—A given name.

The author of the lyrics of that once popular ditty "Kelly from the Emerald Isle" never announced publicly whether he chose that name for the hero of his ballad because it fitted the rhythm, or from a more subtle motive.

As a matter of fact, the name was singularly appropriate to the spirit of this humorous jingle of adventure, because the given name from which the Kelly group of family names is derived means nothing more or less than "strife."

These family names, however, are very ancient and honorable ones, coming in the majority of cases from the country about Wicklow, in Ireland.

But with them again we have another example of the wide difference between the ancient and modern spelling which is much less marked. The given name from which Kelly, O'Kelly are derived is "Ceallach," which certainly does not look like "Kelly," but there is really little difference in the pronunciation of the two.

A Bit Misleading. When Mary Jeving married William Smythe and was able to have calling cards with "Mrs. William Smythe" engraved upon them, she felt that life had no higher pride in store for her.

"It makes me so angry," she said to one whom she suspected of carelessness in the matter, "to be spoken of or thought of as 'Mrs. Mary Smythe.' It is an insult to William's memory."

To Save Time. Pat was grumbling because he had no money to spend while on his summer holidays.

"I don't know what to do," he groined to his friend Jack. "Now, Pat," he said, "you ought to take your wages to the post-office and put five or six shillings in every week. By the time your holidays are due you will have a comfortable sum in hand."

The Climax. Some little girls were boasting of their respective families. The minister's little daughter said, "Every package that comes for my papa is marked 'D.D.'"

Black Hen Eggs. An Irishman hailed at a dairy and asked the dairymaid if he could supply him with a dozen eggs laid by a black hen.

After Pat had picked out his eggs, the dairymaid asked him how he could distinguish eggs laid by a black hen.

It takes about five and a third times as much heat to convert a given quantity of water already at the boiling point into steam as it does to heat the water to the boiling point—that is, if we had one half of water already at the boiling point, 212 degrees Fahrenheit, it would take as much heat to convert it into steam as it would to heat five and a third buckets of water all the way from the freezing, 32 degrees Fahrenheit, to the boiling point!

The Unnoticed Spring.

On Louis Anderson's farm there was a fifteen-foot well that had never contained more than two feet of water at the most, and that even during a short drought was often dry.

Anderson had penetrated perhaps three inches into the porous material when his bar suddenly broke through and dropped about two feet.

How many people whom we pass on the street seem dull and unimpassioned, incapable of great thoughts or of fine deeds? And yet, who can tell what spring of strong, pure feeling may not lie deep beneath an unpromising and often unlovely human exterior?

Both Were Old Fashioned. An old physician of the last generation was noted for his brusque manner and old fashioned methods, says the Edinburgh Scotsman.
