Mammoth CLEARING SALE

Entire Stock of Dry Goods & Gents' Furnishings

This is not a Stock-Reducing Sale, but a Genuine Clearance of our Entire Dry Goods, Ready-made Clothing and Gents' Furnishings. $10,000 worth of High-class Up-to-date Dry Goods and Gents' Furnishings going at a great saving to the buying public.

Seldom, if ever, has there been a chance like this in Durham—a real money-saving proposition. Can you in justice to yourself afford to miss this chance?

We have been getting in new stock right along and our Store is full of First-class Merchandise which you cannot afford to miss buying at prices which mean a great saving to you.

Why we are Making this Change

We have decided to quit the Dry Goods business and purpose going into a real up-to-date line of Groceries and Provisions of all kinds. We feel that in order to do this, we must wipe out our Entire Stock as quickly as possible, as we have a lot of changes to make, remodelling and re-decorating the Store before putting in our new line.

A Word to the Public

We have had a chance to sell our stock at a rate on the $, but feel that we would rather sell it at a saving to our customers, than sell it in a lump lot, as we feel sure we can both benefit by doing so.

Sensational Bargains

We are sorry that space will not permit us quoting prices this week, but a call at our store will convince you that we mean to clear our stock out as quickly as possible, which means a great saving not only for the present, but also for the future, as certain lines are soaring higher every day.

Sale Starts Saturday, August 30th

Goods will be sold only for Cash or for Produce at market prices. No Credit given during this Clearance Sale.

MR. MEIGHEN'S TIRADE

While Mr. Meighen at Eugenia, spoke fluently and well and covered a lot of ground as our report elsewhere shows, we venture the assertion that few or no Liberals or U.F.O.'s were seduced from their party affiliations by his arguments.

His bitter denunciations of the tariff were not convincing, and we are sure that Premier King or Crerar or Forke (or Miss MacPhail) could make an equally good case from an opposite point of view.

The tariff for so long has been the plaything of partyism that it is difficult to form an unbiased opinion. We do not believe that the so-called exodus to the States was caused by the tariff. Indeed reports indicate that the movement is reversing and Canadians coming home again, but of this nothing was said. Forces other than the tariff are at work, said forces being quite independent of whether Brit or Tory are in power.

Mr. Meighen would be stronger if he would take off his blue-ruin spectacles and see Canada in a healthier color sometimes.

With Premier King preaching Prosperity—Present and Prospective, because the tariff is lowered, and his greatest opponent seeing nothing ahead but ruin and downfall unless the tariff is boosted up, there seems room for some one (say Robert Forke, Progressive Leader) to tell us which is right, or if both are wrong! Failing that the only thing to do is to think for one's self, a good rule to go by at any time.

MARS IN THE LIMELIGHT

Rarely does anything pertaining to the heavens around us get into the first page of the papers, but this was the case this week and last, the occasion being the passing of the planet Mars at its nearest point to our old earth. Not for 120 years has there been so close an approach and not for the same period will it be as near again. It was "only" 34 millions of miles distant and to add to the interest, some electrical experts at widely different points thought they received unusual signals and it was given out that the people of Mars were trying to get in touch with us!

Scientists laughed at the idea and showed how it would be impossible to cross the wide gap between the atmospheres of the two planets with any kind of radio or other means. It is generally conceded that Mars of all the planets has best conditions to sustain life as we understand it. It seems to have land and water areas, snow comes and goes and certain rectilinear markings seem to be the work of intelligences of some kind. Scientists should not laugh too loud; it may be that the Marsian people have advanced far beyond us in knowledge and achievements and may have some way of penetrating space that we have not. Our modern wonders of the past quarter century would have been laughed at 50 years ago.

However we can still admire the rosy planet at present in the south east heavens about 9 p.m. and about the same hour in the south west heavens can be seen the great planet Jupiter, at a distance five or six times greater than Mars, and overwhelmingly larger. These two "neighbors" of ours, at present sentinels in the evening sky, are surpassed in brightness by Venus at present a morning star, so bright is she that some good people in Regina and places nearer home became excited at a "bright light" to be seen in the east in the morning. Anyone up Tuesday morning about 4 a.m. would see a rare sight—Venus appearing as one of the tips of the crescent moon, and was almost occulted. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

THE VACANT CHAIR

To my life long friend, Mrs Donald McKechnie, Glenelg.

The vacant chair stands lone and grim beside the window pane:
Upon its seat a cushion thin,
And by its side a cane.

The one who sat within its arms
Is gone beyond my ken,
For years he was my greatest care
I to his wants did tend.

But now he's gone: the vacant chair
Looks back at me so sad.
If I could see him sitting there
My heart would be so glad.

The house is lonely and so sad,
And grief grips me again:
I miss the rocking of the chair
And the tapping of his cane.

When he was here I oft got tired
And sometimes give him pain,
But now how gladly would I work
And never more complain.

Yet for his sake I know 'tis best
That he has journeyed home,
For now his spirit is at rest
And never more will moan.

I did not know I'd miss him so
'Till after he'd departed;
And when I see the vacant chair
I feel so broken hearted.

But I'll remember other folk
I'll turn my thoughts to Him who knows
And carries all my cares.
