To the Durham Review, Durham, Ont. Dear Editor and Readers: As I was a correspondent to the Review for a few years in the nineties from Priceville, taking every alternate week in gathering up the news with the venerable correspondent, John McDonald, who is still on the job, and although over a quarter of a century has rolled by, I am still much interested in the Review. Since leaving Priceville, I have received almost 1400 copies of the paper. It is still new when it arrives, and it isn't long in the house until I have scanned its pages.
