"A musician," eays the dictionary, "is one skilled in the art of music." In the light of the above definition, and in answer to the above question. most people would probably reply in to change a twenty-dollar bill: "I thanks you for the compliment, suh, but ah can't do it." A musician, in the popular mind, is one who is skilled in the performance of music, and very few claim this distinction. This is a day of such spectacular specialism that the ordinary person is a bit apt to feel discouraged as to his ability, and to sit back and watch the stars, instead of hitching his wagon to one.

But this popular opinion is a very one-sided one. Many a person has a soul filled with the love of music, and an intense longing to express this feeling, but his vocal chords and fingers simply will not function as he desires. Is that any reason why he should be shut out from the enjoyment of that for which his soul craves?

Even if, as the old nursery rhyme gavs. "There is music in me, but you can't get it out," is that any real reason why I cannot become skilled in the art of music, in that branch of it to which the vast majority of people belong-the art of listening?

And listening is an art Listening re quires the use of a mind as well as the use of a pair of ears A trained mind can hear many thing that to an ordinary untrained mind are just so many half of his time to the teaching of the art of listening and the appreciation of real music?

Many music lovers would then be enabled to take advantage of the training they desire, but rarely can get, and the love and enjoyment of music would become much more general.

The good old fashion of taking a tonic in the Springtime, like most of the customs of our grandparents, is based upon sound common sense and good medical practice. Winter is always a trying time for those who are not in rugged health. Many men, women and children go through the winter on reserve strength they have stored up during the sunny summer months, and grow increasingly pale and languid as the spring days approach. A tonic for the blood and such people, but putting color in the cheeks and banishing that tired feeling that worries thousands of people at this season of the year.

By Mrs. Jeanette Leader, Member of the Ontario Horticultural Association. It has been said that we are fast drifting toward an age of flowers that will have no fragrance. No profusion of blossom, no exquisite coloring or vigor of growth can take the place of a lack of fragrance. How keen the disappointment when we are shown a wonderful rose of rare coloring and perfect form to find its gorgeous petals yield no perfume. One may tire of brilliant coloring and of showy effects, but the garden that has the sweet-smelling flowers will never lack appreciation. When the rose is mentioned we at once associate it with sweetness. We love flowers for their fragrance, even though they are not very beautiful, but when they are fragrant as well as beautiful our enthuslasm knows no bounds.

Plant the old fashioned fragrant ones even though the catalogues tell you wonderful stories about the newer, larger varieties. They may be charming to look upon, but flowers that are not sweet fail to satisfy because in striving to produce a larger flower, with more gorgeous coloring, the rare fragrance has been lost. The smaller flowers have usually the sweetest perfume. The very nams of mignonette. lily-of-the-valley, lilac, rose, pinks and stocks of our mother's gardens bring to our memory the recollections of sweet laden breezes, and no quality in the flowers of our youth strikes the chord of remembrance with as true a touch as fragrance. If you have only limited space for a garden this spring, "Tis one with me-I take no heed; choose flowers that are fragrant. you are planning a rose garden, buy To serve my gracious Master's ends. the varieties that will delight you with a rare perfume.

Banish The Blues

By Observing Nature's Basic Rule

Those who suffer from despondency, listlessness and headaches can usually trace the cause of these conditions to constipation. They are frequently brought about by overwork, nervous strain, lack of outdoor exercise or sleep, or improper food, but more frequently by the nonobservance of nature's basic ruleregular thorough bowel elimination. Poisons from waste matter left behind are picked up by the blood and absorbed by the system, weakening the nerves and lowering the vitality. Nujol, the scientific internal lubricant, corrects constipation in nature's own way by augmenting the supply of nature's lubricant. Nujol by softening the waste matter thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. It is gentle, safe and natural in its action, and can be taken for any length of time without any ill effect.

Ask your druggist for Nujel today and remember-look for the name "Nujol" in red on both bottle, label and package.
