DOMINION

From a published poem by 'Fidelis'-Agnes M. Machar.

Have found, in these our western wilds, one common life at last :

She wakes, - a band of scattered homes and colonies no more.

But a young nation, with her life full beating in her breast,

With fruitful many-sided life that courses through her veins ;

The grace and courtesy of France, the Irish fancy bright,-

And, chief of all our holy faith,-of all our treasures best.

Holding that righteosness exalts the people that it leads ;

As yet the waxen mould is soft, the opening page is fair

The stamp of true nobility, high honor, stainless truth

The love of country, soaring far a-bove dull party strife;

The love and fear of Nature's God-a nation's highest praise.

Spreading the blessings of her sway to her remotest bounds,

Strong in their liberty and truth, to shed from shore to shore

While, with the fame of her fair name, a continent resounds.

So, in the long hereafter, this Canada shall be

The worthy heir of British power and British liberty :

True to her high traditions, to Britain's ancient glory

A light among the nations, till nations are no more

Of patient saint and martyr, alive in deathless story;

A people poor in pomp and state, but rich in noble deeds,

The English honor, nerve and pluck,-the Scotsman's love of right,-

The Saxon's faithful love of home, and home's affection blessed

It rests with those who rule us now, to leave their impress there,-

The earnest quest of noble ends; the generous heart of youth;

The love of learning, art and song,-the crowning grace of life :

The love of science, soaring far through Nature's hidden ways

Through the young giant's mighty limbs, that stretch from sea to sea,

Four nations welded into one,,-with long historic past,

There runs a throb of conscious life-of waking energy.

A noble future in her eyes-the Britain of the West.

From Nova Scotia's misty coast to far Columbia's shore,

Hers to be the noble task to fill the yet untrodden plains
