David was conscious of a sort of angry impatience; her calmness got on his nerves. How could one bother about a crease in a sheet when death was hovering round the bed? What did anything matter if Mary were dying?

What She Said.

Little Dolly was having a great treat. It was Saturday morning, and her mother had taken her out into the town to help her with the shopping Among the shops they went to was the greengrocer's, which was kept by a man who was very fond of children. With a smile he gave the little girl a big, red apple.

The child took it, but not one word of thanks passed her lips. Dolly's mother was somewhat embarrassed by her little girl's lack of manners and said: "Dear, what are you going to say?

THE WAY TO KEEP LOVE

A young man writes: "I am about to be married. My fiances and I are very much in love with each other, but as we look around among our married acquaintances we see that some husbands and wives have lost all the fine romance and sentiment with which they must have started out on the matrimonial voyage. They are indifferent to each other. Sometimes they are even hostile. Nearly always they bore each other.

We do not want this calamity to happen to us. What can we do to keep our love as fresh when we are fifty as it is now?"

Be Lovable. If we wish to be loved we must make ourselves lovable. You can't turn the entire business of keeping in love over to the other party. You have to lend a hand at the tack yourself. A woman should do all she possibly can to keep her husband fascinated. A, man should make every effort to keep his wife thrilled at the sound of his footsteps, But when both have put forth their utmost endcavor to keep love alive, the individual must supplement it by making a few hypnotic passes over him-

For love is largely a matter of selfhypnosis. Even when we are in love, we know, in our lucid moments, that the men and women we have set our hearts upon are not really more beautiful, more intelligent, more angelic than the remainder of humanity. But for the time being they seem like that to us because we have concentrated all of our thoughts upon their perfections and have declined even to consider their defects. Nothing would do more to promote domestic felicity and to keep husbands and wives in love with each other than for them to carry this state of mind into their wedded lite, and to refuse to wake up from the trance into which they have thrown themselves. Therefore I can give no better advice about how to retain your at fection for your wife than just to focus your eyes upon her shining virtues and wilfully blind yourself to her

It is literally true that we can think ourselves in love, or out of love. We, can glorify the good qualities of our husbands and wives so that we see them as we want them too be, and not as they are, or we can turn a spot-light on their bad qualities and gaze upon them until they become unendurable
