Miss MacPhail Justifies Her Letter

After Messrs. Ross and Edwards of Kingston and Frontenac had attacked Miss MacPhail's loyalty over the now famous letter on the Chinese situation, on the floor of Parliament, she made the following able reply, which adressed all opposition. It is quoted direct from Hansard:

MISS MACPHAIL: Since the letter I have written to the schoolchildren in my constituency has been placed on Hansard and an attack made upon it, may I make a reference to it now? Whether the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Ross) is in order or not, I have a right to reply to the attack made upon me and to make a reference to the letter I wrote to my constituency. First, however I want to thank the hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Edwards) and the hon. member for Kingston for the courtesy they have extended to me in giving equal rights to this House, because I desire that women have equal rights in regard to criticism, equal rights in matter of abuse, as well as equal rights in the best things of life. May I tell the House now how that letter came to be written? When I came here in 1921 I had with me in the service of my constituency, and finding that the wheels of justice turned very slowly—provokingly slowly—and seeking for some way to help my people, I thought of trying to inform the children in school as to what went on in this House, and I wrote a series of letters—12 or 14—discussing government matters and the form of government we have in Canada. Whether the letters were good or not is not for me to say, but several schools in Ontario have ordered them by the hundred from that time to the present and I have been asked by teachers to put them in book form so that they might be used in public schools. After finishing that series of letters I did not do much in that line, in fact I did not write a letter till the last session of the session before last, and during my campaign last year, many teachers told me "If you are elected I hope you will write some letters again. We like them so much." I wrote one letter this session previous to one under dispute—quite a lengthy letter dealing with two subjects altogether unrelated. I told them about the new Governor General and his wife, how very much I liked them, the impression I received when I was entertained at Rideau Hall. If hon. members do not believe me, I can quote from a letter from one of the school children. I received dozens of them. The child said he was pleased to think my impression of the Gov. General was so good and he said: "I am glad that the Gov. General is a fine man and that you like him." I was patriotic in one thing anyway. The letter proceeds: "I hope the bill passes about the soldiers' farms lands because it is much needed."

Then he said he hoped I had a good time when I entertained some little girls at dinner, which I had told about. I described my visit to the pentagonary. Unless I tell hon. members about the work I carry on in my constituency, it may seem odd to them that I should deal with such a thing as a birthday party, but I know children, and I know they enjoy hearing of a birthday party. In the last letter I said I had covered the form of government thoroughly, and there seemed to be so little in connection with Parliament to talk about that I would be glad if they would suggest subjects to me to write about. I got ten or twelve letters suggesting that I should tell them what I thought about the Chinese war. I had not thought of it until it was suggested by letters. However I must tell the hon. members the whole thing, so that they will understand the matter. I sent them a little poem about two roasters having a fight and I suggested it was a very good thing, if two people wanted to fight, to let them fight it out and let the rest of the people alone. A little boy named John McMillan said, "I liked the poem. I thought it referred to the Chinese trouble, and would like to know what you think of it?"

That is the reason I wrote the letter. I have no apology to make for that letter. There may be one or two inaccuracies in it in detail, but it is substantially correct, as I hope hon. members will realize shortly. The hon. member for Kingston does not want to call the war in 1839 and not want to call the war in the province deals with the 'Opium War' and the Boxer rebellion in the same way she does. Premier Ferguson is Minister of Education and should have been more careful before condemning what the authorized history teaches. Britain has not been the worse but the better, that many of her statesmen have condemned the Opium War.

These places that have cancelled their invitations for Miss MacPhail to speak, are the losers and does not in the least affect her. She will be more in demand than ever. The persecution begun by the Globe, will prove a boomerang. Those who accuse Miss MacPhail of disloyalty do not know her, or else are moved by partizan spirit.

HARD ON TEACHERS

An educational change of considerable importance is announced to be put into effect. Teachers, who in the past have attended and passed the Normal School course, and passed their certificate, are not yet so blessed; they are asked to attend another year to further qualify them for their chosen work. By this means it is claimed better work will be done and the standard raised all over. We hope this result will follow the new move, but it will likely rouse resentment by many who have got out of the way of strenuous application while attending to the onerous duties of the school room. One good thing about it: the two years required by new teachers are not to come together, but how many years between we don't know. After passing the first year they will be allowed to teach, going back when called upon.

IS MISS MACPHAIL DISLOYAL?

It is safe to say that few readers of the Ontario press have failed to see this last week the name of Agnes MacPhail, M.P. The simple writing of a letter to teachers to be read to pupils purely as a matter of education has brought her unexpected publicity. She has been accused of writing this letter as a piece of disloyal propaganda; to influence the young against Britain and the Empire; a dangerous woman, etc. All the veriest tommyrot and buncombe.

She has written many letters and this was one of a series undertaken by her to enlighten the young mind as to the various things which are done for their good. It was all in line with her instinct as a teacher, and in no way detracted from her usefulness as a parliamentary representative.

We give space this week to her speech in Parliament taken from Hansard, and an unbiased reader we believe, would give it commendation. The criticism and controversy has brought to light the fact that the authorized British History, taught in every High School in the province, deals with the 'Opium War' and the Boxer rebellion in the same way she does. Premier Ferguson is Minister of Education and should have been more careful before condemning what the authorized history teaches. Britain has not been the worse but the better, that many of her statesmen have condemned the Opium War.

These places that have cancelled their invitations for Miss MacPhail to speak, are the losers and does not in the least affect her. She will be more in demand than ever. MULOCK

A former resident of Glenelg who will be remembered by many older citizens, died at the home of her daughter Mrs Maud Woods, Kramer, N. Dakota, on March 30, in the person of Mrs John Cameron (nee Janet Beaton), the last surviving member of the late Angus Beaton's family. We extend deep and heartfelt sympathy to every member of the Cameron family who mourn the loss of an exceptionally kind and loving mother. Mrs Cameron in a large degree fulfilled the description of the proverb, whereof of such women it is said "Her children rise up and call her blessed." Her husband also praised her. Her sterling Christian character, cheerful and unselfish disposition endeared her to many friends who will long remember her kindly deeds. The Cameron home was always noted for its hospitality, a welcome home for the poor, for the weary traveller and for the minister of the gospel, a home where family worship was always conducted. God's people can say, This body in the ground In silent hope may lie Till the last trumpet's joyful sound Shall call us to the sky. The late Mrs Cameron is an aunt of Mrs Wm Fulton, Mulock, Mrs W. H. Patterson, Priceville and the Beaton families of Glenelg.
