Funeral of Late Mrs Backus

THE DURHAM REVIEW

Backus on Saturday afternoon last, The following students of Durham to Queen Street Church and thence High School have obtained Pass to Maplewood cemetery, was a glowstanding on the Lower School Departing tribute to the worth of one, who in lifetime, proved a helper and friend to many of those present and granting standing in those subjects who were there to pay her the last spending aweek at the parental nonce.

Grammar, Art or Botany, may write at Cabri, Sask., the family were all present. Deceased's pastor Rev J. ment of Education in these subjects. Peters, was in charge of the service and in his remarks, the mourners found much solace and comfort. The suddenness with which the late Mrs. Backus was stricken low, was the outcome of Mr Peters' text, which proved to be the same as that used for the late Alex McDonald the Tay previous in the Presbyterian Church: Matt. 25: 13, 'Watch ,therefore' etc. Mr Peters quoted many familiar and comforting phrases from scripture, which he said will never die for they convey too much. We, who are left behind, speculate as to what is beyond the vale. But this is all we can do as God doesn't give power of judgment to any human being but reserves this for himself.

> In the sudden deaths that had tranes of this life.

Just as at school exams one's knowledge is not gained all at once, but rather the work of months : FO with life-our churches, praise and P stones to prepare us for the higher Mr Duncan McQuarrie's. life. If the religion of life is worth while, it is intended to stand the stress and strain of worldly temptations and conditions.

Mr Peters took occasion to give some personal reminiscenses of deceased and gave tribute to her regularity at church service and devotion to family, who were planning to celebrate the golden wedding event this summer with their parents.

In closing, Mr Peters said we should thank God for all He has put into our lives of sorrows as well as say in speaking of the heavenly week. home, "I will be there by the grace of God."
