Whole or Crushed Oats for Horses To try to find out whether it is worth while to crush cats that are fed! to horses the Experimental Farms carried out a test from the 10th of June to the 5th of December.

The test was confined to four two horse teams. One horse in each team was fed a grain ration consisting of whole oats, while its mate received crushed oats. These grain rations were alternated for two weeks, one horse receiving whole oats every other period and crushed oats in the intervening period, while the other team was fed just the reverse way.

The results of these tests are reported in the 1926 Annual Report of the Animal Husbandry Division where it is shown that there is every little, if anything, to be gained by crushing the oats for working horses. In the 168 days when the test was going on the horses fed on whole cats showed gains in 6 periods totalling in all 255 pounds, while in 7 periods losses in weight were shown totalling 210 given extra room without additional pounds, which shows a net gain of 45 pounds for the whole period.
