Smith Bros. Ford Sales and Service Motorists may Kill Curs

The infomation given out by High Constable Peters of Kent Co. that motorists have the right under the law to kill doge constituting nuisances on the highways will be news to most people. The wide dissemination of this information, if correct, should induce owners to keep better watch on and control of their pets. While every motorist at times feels that slaying would be justified, the innate decency of most people rather rebel at such drastic action. A dog probably stands on a different any other animal. Generally speak ing the death of a dog is a bereave ment, especially if there are children in a family and no decent person de sires to cause sorrow unnecessarily Owners however, should not take advantage of this innate decency to the extent of allowing their dogs to become pests. A dog may be a pest in other ways than in chasing mot
