"HONEST JOHN" OLIVER DEAD

Thursday last week the Premier of British Columbia, "Honest John" Oliver, passed away after several months' illness, though always able to consult and advise. He took a sudden turn for the worse and died at his home before his physician could be summoned.

The passing of this statesman calls for comment. Not many years ago his father passed away in Artochesia where his family are well-known, a nephew, Farquhar Oliver, being South Grey's member in the Legislature.

He was a man of the people by birth and temperament, more proficient in the rugged arts of the pioneer than any other Canadian statesman. Miner, farmer, woodsman, engineer, stone mason, he brought to the Premiership a first-hand knowledge of the pioneer's problems that greatly helped him.

He was born July 31, 1856, in Derbyshire, England, second son of Robert and Emma Oliver. His father, originally a farmer, went into the mining business in John's youth. A few years in elementary schools completed John's school days.

His 11th birthday found him a donkey boy in his father's mine on half time. At age of twelve years, he quit school, and entered on the business of collecting eggs and selling them at Duxton market. He bought a pony and cart and as a farmer's agent, did well for a few years.

In 1877 he migrated to B. C. and worked as an axeman for the C.P.R. He took up a homestead, built bridges, bought and operated himself a threshing outfit, and was amongst the first licensees as steam engineer in B. C. In the Delta district, he built dykes and dug drains, and dabbled in politics. In 1898 he made an extempore speech which attracted attention. Soon he was recognized as a debater of merit, and 1900 found him in the Legislature.

modern headings such as the following:

"Girl Killed in motor smash at Greenwood"—"Hit and run motorist fined"—"Cars damaged in collision"—"Crashed into death by a miracle"—"Fort coup hit a sister coupe sending it to the ditch"—"Dodge sedan struck a buggy; buggy badly smashed and nothing worth while left above the chassis in the car"—"Toronto man in serious condition following motor crash"—"Two men killed when auto collide"—"Motor car and truck meet in head-on collision," etc. etc.

THEY'RE AWAY NEXT WEEK

With no fewer than 425 entries in the great Marathon swim being staged in Lake Ontario, by the C. N. Exhibition on August 31st, the truth of the old saw that "Misery loves company" is bound to be exemplified. The winner in such a contest will have world wide fame as well as $50,000. Quite a number of women have entered and entrants come from all over the world.

AVIATION TRAGEDIES

The offering of big money prizes for aeroplane flights has led to extraordinary activity in the air. Flights east and west across the Atlantic since Lindbergh led the way promise to become common in spite of the fact that Nungesser and Colward, have apparently met their death in Labrador or adjoining coasts, as no trace of them can be found.

The Pacific Ocean has also furnished tragedies. Flights from California to Honolulu have taken place and on Saturday, Art Goebel, Hollywood and Martin Jensen, Honolulu, received $25,000 and $10,000 respectively for their success. J. D. Dole, the donor, making the presentation himself.

Other Pacific Ocean racers in planes called "Golden Eagle" and "Miss Doran" carrying four men and one woman may have met death, for the yhave not been seen since they went off. The woman, with two men in one of the planes, was Miss Doran, a Michigan school teacher, who had ambitions as an aviator. An active search has been made for the two planes but without success at this writing. Not only these but one of the searchers, the "Dallas Spirit" on its errand of mercy, has also gone. No word came from them, silence followed, justifying the conclusion that they have also met death on Pacific waters.

A tanker vessel reports having seen flares about 300 miles west of San Francisco. It waited for daylight but found nothing, the great ocean keeping its secrets. It is to be feared that the hurry and excitement to be first to win the prize may have led to overlooking something that was necessary for safety. The paths of every new enterprise on land and sea is strewn with deaths and aviation is no exception. The conquest of the air may yet be made but at present it is in the pioneer stage, at least for long flights.
