Russia is More Communistic Than 4 Years Ago, Says J. G. McDonald

"No Danger of Party Split"

Russia in some raspects is more communistic than it was four years ago, and the Communists are "still masters in their own house," said James G. McDonald, of New York, chairman of the National Executive Board of the Foreign Policy Associa tion, recently.

"The Communist Party is really a which is being grossly exaggerated abroad," said Mr. McDonald, "I had thought the ruling classes in Russia tionalization and expansion of indus-

Chamberlin in Physical Test Told He Can't Judge Distance

Clarence Chamberlin, transatlantic pilot, almost failed in his physical examination for a pilot's licence recently. He was examind by Dr. Conrad Berens of 30 East Fortleth Street, examiner for the Department of Com merce, which issues licenses for interstate flying. He gave Cramberlin a rating of 25 bad points. Thirty points would have disqualified him.

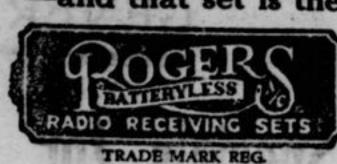

One point against the veteran pilot, noted for his control of airplanes and his landings, was that he had no judgment of distance. This amused Chamberlin and his friends. A card with a single line on it was handed to him and he was told to hold it at arm's length and draw it toward his eyes until he could see two lines. Doing this twenty times a day will correct his faulty estimate of distance, he

"Of course, there are other gratifications in gossip. Most of us like to be the first to tell a bit of news. The gossip enjoys that feeling. But more especially he enjoys the sense of tearing down some one else. If he can lower th standing of some one more important than himself he thus tends to elevate his own relative importance. So-and-so is no better than "That 'No man is a hero to his valet' is very true, but little understood psychologically. It is not because the man is not a hero but because the valet is a valet. In other words, the valet projects his own failings into his master and thus persuades himself that he is as good a man as his

Its resemblance to the original, of

A good deal of gossip, the psychol ogists believe, thus evolves. Its origin is often doubtful. It is assumed that all gossip is harmful; there seems to be no evidence that people indulge in any other kind. But this oftentimes may be due to the natural human tendency to make a good story better. Professor Robert S. Woodworth, head o fthe department of psychology at Columbia University, lays considerable emphasis on this point. He has observed a small town "dress up" a mere rumor until it began to be passed along as an amazing fact. All of which comes under the heading of gossip, and often very harmful gossip, yet it cannot exactly be labeled a crime and laid at the door of a single

As to why-as is commonly heldwomen are more prone to gossip than to improve your digestion by starting men, there may be more than one answer. But it is Professor Woodworth's observation that women more often than men do offend in this way.

Practice Among Women.

"It is probably because of their status," he said, 'which is more apt to be decided for them than by them. Especially in small groups, such as the country town, or among the wives of army officers or college Faculties, you will find that the women are inclined to accept less willingly the rank or position in which they are placed than are their husbands. The husbands may get along well enough. but as often as not there is resent ment and dissatisfaction among the women. Gossip is one result. course, too, women have more time than men to gossip, as a rule,"

Probably if a vote were to be taken among the psychologists, the proposed law in Germany would lose by a large majority. . From their point of view gossiping is not a thing that can be stamped out by sending the offender to jail. The threat of a jail sentence or banishment might act as a deterrent, but to what extent remains to be seen. Viewed as an expression of inferiority, gossiping seems likely to endure so long as we have a sense of inferiority o ra condition exists in which numbers of people feel themselves inferior to the

There is, by way of parallel, the case of the tattle-tale in school who is most often cured of his failing by being held in contempt by the rest of the class-and the teacher, too. This method, crude as it may be, seems to bear the stamp of the best psychological approval. Gossiping and tale-bearing lose their zest when the bearer actually loses caste.

Old New England tried the ducking chair and even the bridle, this last a sort of halter with an fron pin which pressed against the offender's tongue when he (or she) opened her mouth. But it did not stop gossiping.

After reading that all over what about the "listeners-in" on the Party lines in Rural Ontario and the way they spread the scandal?

America, too, has her traffic problems, and one of the solutions adopted is "one-way streets," in which only traffic going in one direction is allowed. In one town, the story goes, a policeman stopped a girl who was driving a car. "Madam," he said, "you are breaking the law. This is a one-way street." The girl commenced to cry. "Well," she said, "I was only going one way, wasn't I?"

It might be remarked, too, that the middle-of-the-road politician kicks up

Earthworms Detect Light And Colors, Says Scientist

Though unable to see, earthy orms can still detect light, and can distinguish between colors. They do not seem to mind red light particularly, but a streak of blue light is like a streak of fire to them. In Science, Professor G. H. Bretnall of Baker University describes a test which he made on the color-sensitiveness of worms: "For the experiment ! used a box about two and a half feet ong, two feet and eighteen inches high. This I thoroughly blackened inside. For light I used gas with a mantle and a reflector. The light was passed through a carbon disulphide prism and fell on the box. Into this array of spectral colors I dropped angleworms. As they moved to get away from th light they always went out the red end. They would pull back from the blue as if it hurt them

CARRIED WIFE TO BED

Suffered So She Could Not Walk. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Minesing, Ontario.—"I am a practical nurse and I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to suffering women. For three months I was almost helpless and could not sit at the table long enough to drink a cup of tea. Many a time my husband carried me to bed, I would be so weak. Then he read in the paper of a woman suffering as I did who got better after taking the Vegetable Compound, so he went and got it for me. When I had taken three bottles was just like a new woman and have had splendid health ever since. When I feel any bearing-down pains I always take it; sometimes a half bottle or whatever I need. It is my only medicine and I have told many a one about it. Any one wanting to know more about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I will gladly write to her. I do all I can to recommend it for I feel I owe my life and strength to it." - Mrs. NEAL Do you feel broken-down, nervous, and weak sometimes? Do you have this horrid feeling of fear which somenot well? Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is excellent to take at such a time. It slways helps, and if taken regularly and persistently
