V. 18 There was something in the words, "Good Master," or in the tone with which they were uttered, that seemed to Jesus to be in need of correction. The man had used the word "good" in a light and even unthinking fashion. Did he realize the true meaning of the thing he said? Jesus at this moment points away from himself and everything else to God. God alone is the good, the one source of

V. 19. Having thus prepared his really serious frame of mind, Jesus answers the question by referring first to the requirements of the Decalogue, particularly the laws of the Second Table, governing our duties to our fellow men.
