PREMIER KING ALL POWERFUL
 When King Edward was crowned and a French Canadian habitant from the backwoods heard of it, he said: "He must have been pulled with Laurier." Dat that story, says the Calgary Herald, "fades into common-places alongside a letter from a Saskatchewan farmer to Premier King, urging him to arrange for copious showers in order to make the 1928 crop a success." And when the Premier is at it, he should not overlook the views of a certain man not far from here who wants legislation to provide that all rain shall fall between midnight and 5 a. m. so that the day should not be spoiled for any sports!

ARE GREY COUNTY HOMES TOO BARE AND AUSTERE?
 (Toronto Star Weekly)
 Explores the lack of Verandahs and Paint as aids to Beauty
 On a motor trip throughout the province one observes with regret how few of the farm houses are adorned with verandahs. On most of them there is not even a porch or stoop—the front is a sheer flat wall into which is set a door or two or three windows. Here and there, at long intervals, one sees a house with a verandah—and as a rule, it is a handsome house flanked by unskillfully good barns and stables.

From this we do not conclude that the verandah made the place prosperous. No doubt it was the prosperity of the place that gave forth the verandah. And yet this ornamentation and convenience on the front of a farm dwelling not only adds to the general air of prosperity, but promotes the prosperity itself. The stranger is impressed, not knowing why. The man who wants to buy a farm may turn in at that gate instead of the one he has just passed and he may be quite unaware that it was the verandah that contributed the home-like appearance that attracted him. The agent, the peddler, the canvasser, expects the occupants of the verandah house to be a cut, or two more intelligent than those in the more bleak dwellings along the road. They may be quite astray in imagining this, but the occupants get whatever advantage there is in it for them.

The square, box like, unadorned house is supposed to contain practical people who go in for hard work. Walls and a roof is what they want. They would fear that a verandah would induce loafing and might advertise a leaning to laziness. They would fear that a hammock swung in a place like that would suggest that the owner or his wife snoozed there quiet afternoon when they ought to be working, and that the holder of the mortgage going past in his car, would decide to foreclose. So they decide not only to be industrious, but to look it—and especially to look it, by having the whole place give an air of austere devotion to plain hard work. Yet without a verandah, a hammock, and without a garden of attractive flowers, there may be a great deal of idleness and unthrift, indoors and out on a farm, or in any sort of home anywhere.

Paint as a preservative of wooden buildings is too little valued and used in rural Ontario. Too few barns are painted, and often a house painted when built, never has its colors renewed. In some of our German and some of our French settlements one will see more paint than in all of our other rural sections together. If you motor in Quebec you will see bright colors everywhere and not to please the eye only, but to preserve the buildings and arrest decay.

 It is easy, some will say, to offer such criticisms and so it is. But it would be a lot easier to improve rural architecture and touch it up with paint than many suppose who keep on in the old way. A house, attractively designed, need cost little more than one erected on the box plan and one could almost go so far as to say that paint costs less than the absence of paint.

"A Wedding," says an American paper, "is just a door that leads from dreamland into the school of experience." And so many folks get their fingers jammed in the door.
 Revenge may be sweet but it turns sour soon after you get it.
 What goes up must come down. If you doubt it take a look at the stock market.

New and then one picks up a magazine on the stand these days that makes one curious to see the stuff the editor rejected.
 The old fashioned orator used to make his appeals to the "plain people", but that was before women voted.
 If you are angry count 100 before you speak. If the other fellow is larger and stronger, then run the counting up to 1,000.
