The 'Nancy' now in her Last Resting Place

A unique ceremony was held at Wasaga Beach Tuesday of this week, when a brand new white ensign of the British navy was wafted on the breeze from the peak of the 'Nancy', the little Canadian steamer sunk in the mouth of the Nottawasaga by three American men-of-war in 1814. Her crew escaped but the boat had been sunk preventing her capture by the enemy. There is quite a story connected with the 'Nancy' as one of her officers, Lieut. Worsley, set out with some Indian chiefs, French Canadian voyageurs and the crew and trapped two or three American ships which had been responsible for the sinking of the gallant little schooner. For 114 years no flag has flown over the 'Nancy': for more than a century she was submerged in the river, a prey to souvenir seekers when the water was low. Visitors to the beach were all eager to have some souvenir of the little ship. However, two years ago, a group of Canadians interested in outstanding events of Canadian history, determined that the 'Nancy' should be preserved as a memento of the gallant fight pioneer Canadians put up against overwhelming odds in the war of 1812-14. The provincial government and Simcoe Co. were appealed to for aid and both responded with financial assistance. It will be remembered that at that time suggestions were made to have the 'Nancy' removed to some place where more could see her. Better counsel in the long run prevailed and it was decided that the little schooner should remain on the scene of her courageous fight against superior odds. During the course of the century a little island had been formed about the wreck. On this island Tuesday afternoon the 'Nancy' the ceremony took place and the 'Nancy' is again to bear the flag which flew over her when surrounded by three of the enemy she was sunk.

Notice to Hydro Users

Your local Hydro Commission have received notice from the Ont. Hydro Commission to give the consumers a rebate of one sixth of the amount paid by them in 1927. In place of issuing cheques for the amount as heretofore, credit for the amount due them will be given on their bills.

No bills will be issued this month to domestic (house) consumers, but a four month bill will be issued in October, giving credit on that bill for the amount due them. Commercial and power costs will not be issued as usual this month, but a two months' bill will be issued in September, giving credit on that bill for the amount due them.

The standing of the local hydro plant is in a splendid condition, having a surplus of over $18,000, which is more than enough to pay off all outstanding debentures, after paying the present rebate to consumers.

All consumers who are in arrears of account, please pay Treasurer C. Elvidge by August 28th, as they are liable to be cut off after that date.
