A Thanksgiving Song

We are sowing in the springtime, And the music of the drill; Foretells a joyous harvest, when The granaries we will fill: And the harrow's gentle rustle,

Moving o'er the rumpled ground, As they bring the seasons round.

For the showers of rain in Spring:

When our day's work is done. Now we hear the mower singing,

All around the fields of hay: And all o'er the fields of clover Daily hums the honey bee: There'll be milk, and honey flowing

All the year for you and me,

When the leaves are turning brown Now we'll banish care and sorrow.

And contented we will be: We have plenty for tomorrow Of the fruits of vine and tree. With the products of the garden,

And the orchard stored away: We'll give thanks to Him who gave
