Therefore, since the reforms act we have had more Communal riots, Communal bloodshed, rebellions and attempted rebellions than in the interval between the Mutiny and the passing of the reforms act.

I now come to the question of bond-1250 to 1750, failed to establish the Raj-i-Amman, the Realm of Peace. Indians moreover say that God himself failed to establish the Raji-Amman, in India. Then the British appeared on the scene; defeated the Mahrattas failed to establish the Raj-i-Amman, man. During the mutiny of the Indian army this realm of peace was disturbed for the first and only time. And then the Indians flocked to the In this context let me bring to the notice of Dr. Sutherland a speech of the late Lord Sinha: "If the British abandoned India we should and would mend a cable to catch them at Aden led yarn; we taste nothing in its puri-tectural wonder of the world. The petual change.-Rousseau. the administrative wonder of the world. In a famous passage Gibbon, the historian, describes the reign of the two Antonines as the record, the happiest record of human happiness. The second miracle has been performed by the British raj. It defends the borders and maitains law and order. It encourages in every individual lutf zindagi, the pursuit of individual happiness. Every Indian can, therefore, as he approaches manhood sit at his threshold, contemplative at eye, and forecast the future. He takes as granted that the British raj will repel the invader and maitain law and order without an appeal to conscription, or, as you call it, the draft. And this for the last hundred years at least. Not so the German, the French and other European nations. They never knew the year in which they would not be summoned to the colors. I give a striking illustration of my contention. Punlit Moti Lall Nehru is the author of the scheme for dominfon status. But let us note two points. He has ignored the necessity of giving ms a definition of this status. The reason is obvious. He either does not know the meaning of this status or fears the emergence of the word nationhood. His fears are explained by the fact that they have no word even for nationhood. They think that race and nation are synonymous terms. He has also forgotten to describe the future army and navy of this dominion. This reminds me of the aphorism of George Washington-Governments are based not on rhetoric nor eloquence,

The British people in these circumstances very rightly will insist on al policies affecting the whole of India resting solely in the hands of the Viceroy. It will also insist on there being a strong element of their nationals in all branches of the administration. these circumstances, then, it should obvious to the meanest intelligence that it would be sheer watte of fime to discuss any further the questions, responsible government and dominion

There remains the question of markets, and in the Indian markets the Americans are gainging a stronger foothold every year. The China market is lost. So is the Soviet market.

But the two groups now live under almost absolutely different conditions.

The 16,000 Greenlanders are grouped in fairly compact settlements along the west coast as far north as the 70th parallel. They are directly supervised and protected from evil influences by Danish factors, who have overruled nature and the Eskimo's improvident day to day existence, so that the population has doubled in the last forty years.
