Even the little tots know the rules of the game and can handle a bat and ball with a dexterity that is often surprising.

The school also has from the first been a social centre for the section. Many a time have those stone walls resounded to the mirth and jollity of its people both old and young., and not of its people only but many a guest as well, for the section has an enviable reputation as an entertainer. Its success in this line is largely due to the fact that when its people have J.P. Whelan, Hamilton, Jan. 1894 to decided to do a thing they will see it. June 1896. through to a finish. When they want a program they do not depend on outside talent: they depend on themselves. And lastly, they don't leave the preparation of the program to one or W.A. not made its school a community centre and unfortunately there are too many such schools. Undoubtedly the consolidated school system which poses as the successor of our present system has many advantages over the latter, but it has yet to prove whether it will fill the social life of the community as well as the old rural school of the right kind.

The religious life of the communi to too, has not been neglected.
