LILAC

Of all the lovely gifts the Spring bestows I think that lilac is the loveliest;

In garden prim and ragged hedge it grows, Its fragrant clouds of pearl and amethyst Lifting an incense indescribable

To the clear azure of May's sunny skies, Which, as they wane to sunset colourful, Linger in lilac light till evening dies.

White-blossomed lilac's youth's epitome; With purple pinnacles a prince's plume; Regal, yet sweet with all simplicity,

The very acme of the springtide bloom. So much for sunlit beauty—all in vain I strive to tell of illac in the rain!

TOBACCO MAKERS, SELLERS GIVEN NO TAX RELIEF

(Thos. H. Binnie, Editor)

(Financial Post)

Taxes on tobacco, including excise and customs duties are, and have been, so high that it is profitable to smuggle tobacco across from the United States. There was no change in these customs duties or excise duties of this without being allowed any increase in prices. Retail tobacconists depend on a quick turnover to make a profit because their mark-up is very low. If the retailer is called upon to absorb the extra 3 p. c. sales tax we believe it will force quite a number of them out of business. At present we have not heard how this tax will be absorbed but believe that the wholesaler and the manufacturer will
