In the absence of Rev W. H. Bartiett, indisposed, Rev Mr Hartwell, a missionary 40 yrs in China, home on furlough every 7 or 8 years, gave a running account of the habits, customs and other characteristics of the race. Their dress, willingness to learn on the part of some, and their language, often certain words meaning two different things, but distingushed by a different inflection of the voice, were also discussed. At the evening meeting, Mr Hartwell had a map with all the provinces of China marked and gave a fine description of the different localities in the matter of stature, etc, the northern part of China being well set-up men, not like what we see here, who come mostly from the South Eastern province. He expressed the information that now 7 out of every 10 were Christians and that he looked forward to China yet becoming wholly Christianized. At the close of the service, he sung a hymn in Chinese, without any kindly assistance from any of the choir! Shame!
