Unfelt Jars Affect Sight

A discovery that human eyes are subject to unfelt jars which cause them sometimes to see intermittently like the shutter of a movie camera, was reported by Dr. Milton Metfessel, of the University of Southern California, who credited the discovery to Dr. Wichart, his assistant. The looker does not realize he is seeing intermittently. The effect is called stroboscopic seeing. "The jarring from walking," said

Dr. Metfessel, "motions of the jaw in talking or vibrations set up by an aeroplane motor, can produce intermittent vision. Under certain conditions the pulsing of blood in and about the eyes can produce the same effects.

Mussolini leaves nothing to chance or diet.

He evidently likes fat women, so an edict has gone forth that Italian women "shall return to more generous age, weird growths fifty feet high and lines," and, says The Observer (Lonthat the gracious models of the great master painters of Italy will be brought to life."

"Titian painted the plump ones, but some people prefer Botticelli, whose maidens are as slim and long-lgged as any emaciated damsel of to-day; while while the Virgins and angels of the Sienese school, with their angular bodies and enigmatical eyes, look as though they lived fasting.

"Because the Duce, like Caesar, 'likes men (and women) about him that are fat,' he fancies that womanhood to be 'real' must be , 'curved.' Probably the scraggy laidies of medieval Italy eyed their well-covered sisters with envy, and the plump ones, for all their slimming, remained fatter 'than the fat weed that roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf'."
