Small Farms in Ontario

It is the very general belief that Quebec is preeminently the province of the small farms. But it is not Ontario is. The old idea was that the typical French · Canadian farme divided his lands amongst his sons to keep them around him, so far as pos sible, in that family contentment and social intercourse so typical of the habitant. But the cold figures of the Reindeer For Dominion Bureau of Statistis tells us otherwise. There are 46,539 farms in Ontario of less than 50 acres, and in Quebec only 23,686. - St. Thomas Times-Journal.

The New World Society

There can be no doubt whatever that Mr. Wells' support of a world dictatorship based upon complete and centralized financial control will make a strong appeal to the cosmopolitan group of financial "Samurai" now intriguing for the world's throne; but if, as we believe in common with ordinary humanity, nationality is as natural a fact as individuality and one of the essential characteristics of the species Man, then not all the efforts of all the would-be dictators of the world will be able to eradicate it, or even suspend its action for more than very brief and bloody periods. We are not so chauvinist as to deny the attraction of the idea of a World Society of Nations, even if it be possible, of a World Commonwealth of Nations. The emergence, hesitating and amorphous asit is of a British Commonwealth from the shell of a British Emipre, is perhaps a shadow of a possible future.
