PRICEVILLE

PRICEVILLE

On the occasion of the Sunday evening services, Dec 4th, roads and weather being permitting, the choir of St. Columba United Church, Priceville and the St. John United Church, of Flesherton, purpose interchanging seats in the Amen corner, the outcome of a friendly, courteous and good fellowship feeling prevailing. The ministers of each respective congregation—at whose instance it was proposed—are also interchanging. Let us all hope for a profitable and successful issue.

The young people of Flesherton church are putting on a program on Tuesday at the Y.P.S. here.

Miss Gladys Matheson, Montreal, is on a winter's visit to her aunt, Mrs. D. McDonald (Hanlan) popularly known.

A meeting was held one night last week in the Hall, in connection with the Trail Rangers, lately organized here. Mr. Ball, Hanover (grandson of the late M. P.) introduced the two speakers and explained the object of the meeting and the Society. Mr. Gardiner Cooper, Hanover, and Glen Lloyd, Durham, aspirants for parliamentary honors in Boys' Parliament, were also present. After each had spoken, further describing proceedings, a polling booth was formed and a vote taken as to which should be "it."

Mrs Isaac Pinkerton lately had installed a Blue Flame Oil burner, by Mr Moon, of Durham.

Tuesday, a beautiful day, little snow, good wheeding and sleighing. Mr and Mrs Gordon McLeod and Keith, Swinton Park, visited Monday at A. L. Hincks'.

Mr Allie McLean spent a few days in Toronto and took in Winter Fair.

Mr Alfred Hincks, Toronto, motored up and spent the week end at his home.

Mrs Dan Campbell received a telegram Monday, that her aunt, Mrs. Payne, in Toronto, was seriously ill. Mrs Campbell left on afternoon train for the city.

Misses Phyllis Graham and Ellen Parker, Flesherton, spent the week end with Misses Jean and Almada Hincks.

Tuesday a bee was held at the new church to finish up the shingling.

Another donation of $25 was received for the new church and was greatly appreciated.

Miss Mabel Watters, Toronto, spent the week end at her home.

Miss Beth Hincks, Hampden, spent the week end at her home.

Mr Clifford Hincks, who is teaching school at Clifford, has been off duty with the measles.

HOPEVILLE

KICKED BY A HORSE IN STABLE ENDS FATALLY FOR G GLASS

A very sad accident occurred on Wednesday morning, Nov 23rd, when Gerald S. Glass, aged 46, met almost instant death doing chores at barn of his father-in-law, John Armstrong. Mr Armstrong had gone on an errand to the village while Mr Glass was watering the horses. On returning home a short time later he was shocked to find his son-in-law, lying breathing his last, with marks of horses' hoof on his head. Help was quickly summoned but the unfortunate man was past all human aid and it will never be known just how the accident happened. The late Mr Glass resided here, he was considered a nice sociable person and a good worker. His father and several members of the family, also Mrs Levitt, all of Toronto, attended the funeral, which was held from the home Friday.

Rev. E. Baker, Dundalk, conducted the service. Neighbors and friends gathered in sympathy with the family, this being the second funeral from the home within a year. The late Robt. Armstrong passed away last February. Beautiful flowers were placed on the casket from wife and family: father, brother and sisters: The pall bearers were Messrs Geo H. Wm and Ed. Gilkes, Chas Wale, Wm McKinney and Ed Heard. Interment was made at Salem cemetery.

Such is life: we know not what a day or an hour may bring forth. Mrs Walter Benham has returned from an extended visit with her three married daughters in Toronto. Mrs Agnes McEachnie and Mrs. McHardy and daughter, Toronto, came to see their brother, Alsworth McPhail. Mr McPhail took another stroke last Friday and is at present very low with not much hope of recovery.

Agricultural and Unemployment Problems before Parl't

Miss Macphail's Weekly Letter

The first lap of the session concluded last night, to resume on the 30th of January. Near the close members were more jovial; there was a hint of holiday hilarity and business was speeded up. The depression has quite noticeably affected the spirit of the Commons. There has been little singing while the division bells are ringing, not even during the five divisions we had one day this week, and there has been almost no cheering by far the most significant speech of the session was made by the Hon. W. D. Euler, Liberal member for North Battleford, almost at the very close. Always regarded as a right-wing Liberal, Mr. Euler attacked "world-fear"—the fear of socialistic terms and ideas simply because they were socialistic. The capitalistic system is staggering to its death and it must be bolstered by socialistic ideas, he stated. The problem of production had not been solved but the problem of distribution, that was a difficult problem. It might be by taxation of profits or by profit sharing which was already successfully applied in many industries.

He was not a Socialist, continued Mr. Euler, but he was not afraid of the word. It conveyed a meaning to the great bulk of people, that it did not really possess. As a matter of fact, Socialism was in vogue at the present time. He cited the school system, streets and highways, liquor control boards, railways and hydro. Establishment of a national bank and mutualization of life insurance companies were suggestions made by Mr. Euler. He believed some modification was necessary, even though the country did "drift" safely out of the present depression—another would follow. "If no modifications are made in the system, we may get through," he said, "we may get around that million corner but even if we do, there will be depression after depression under the capitalistic system."

It had been said such depressions were inevitable. He did not believe it. A few decades ago people assumed that plagues and epidemics were dispensations of Divine Providence. Science had proved otherwise, and he believed it would be proven that depressions need not occur.

Last year the member for Red Deer, Mr. Speakman, had put through a resolution urging that the House study economic conditions with a view to scientifically dealing with them. Mr. Euler urged that the government take the necessary steps to carry out the intent of that resolution. Another suggestion was that there should be some control of industry. He thought a division might be up in the Department of Trade and Commerce, which would study the needs of industry and be in a position to advise the investing public when new industries were being proposed, whether or not they would have an opportunity for success. As an instance of avoidable overproduction, he mentioned the paper industry in Canada.

At last having got rid of the treaties by four votes in succession, making six in all, the session came to grips with Canada's greatest problem, an impoverished agricultural industry, unemployment and the railway situation. It came to light this week that while the Canadian Pacific shops throughout the country are opening, the Government has assisted the Canadian Pacific by lending them $1,447,222 without interest, not to be repaid until the railway is earning 5 per cent dividends. If farmers and small business firms could borrow money on the same terms, it would go a long way towards the solution of their difficulties.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen made representations before the Senate Railway Committee. Mr. Best, speaking for the railwaymen, pointed out that during Canada's worst year, 1931, 226 million dollars had been paid in Canada in the form of dividends and that during the same year the number of railway employees had been reduced by 50,000 as compared with 1928, which meant a reduced purchasing power of $105,000,000. And at the same time hundreds of coaches and locomotives were lying idle in the railway yards with the people of Canada paying interest on the money that went into their cost.

Railway labour differs from the findings of the Duff Commission, primarily because it is convinced that the difficulties of the Canadian National, and especially the Canadian National, will not be solved at all "if the employees are menaced by the threat of lowered living standards and are further exposed to the hazards of unemployment." This was the keynote of Mr. Best's appeal.

Mr. Meighen in replying said: "We have reached a pass where we must do a right-about-face or we will bring on a condition of chaos in which the railwaymen will suffer first and most. I am not an alarmist, but it is my duty to tell you that we have reached a point at which our credit is seriously impaired, even in our midst. We cannot go on as we have been doing." The Duff report will not be before the Commons until the re-assembling of the House. A bill based on the findings of the Commission has passed first and second reading in the Senate and is now being considered by the committee of the Senate before which Mr Best appeared.

Amendments were moved on both unemployment and farm conditions, but the Speaker declared each out of order. However, the discussion continued, during which the Minister of Labor made a lengthy speech on how unemployment had been handled by his Department. He was particularly enthusiastic over the "back to the land" movement. Under the Relief Act of 1932 the Dominion Government has completed agreements with all the provinces excepting Prince Edward Island providing for Dominion non-recoverable expenditure of one-third of an amount not to exceed $600 per family, for the purpose of providing a measure of self-sustaining relief to families who would otherwise be in receipt of direct relief. This scheme was to provide for the placing of such families upon the land. The remaining two-thirds of the expenditure to be contributed by the Province and municipality concerned. The Dominion Government has paid up to date $1,385,675 as its share. "It is not Mr. Gordon said, "offered as a solution for unemployment. It is a measure which I believe to be constructive whereby selected families with agricultural backgrounds are placed upon the land where they can sustain themselves. These families would have received at least the amount of our subscription to this scheme under direct relief."

The Hon. W. A. Gordon was extremely critical of the immigration policy of the last decade and pointed out that Governments had spent the vast sum of $36,000,000 on immigration between 1919 and 1932. He regretted the rural population was declining.

Mr J. S. Woodsworth in his speech dealt with the extent of unemployment. He put the number at 800,000 and though the figure was disputed by the Premier, Mr Woodsworth stood by his statement. Making use of articles in newspapers and extracts from his voluminous correspondence, Mr Woodsworth painted a vivid picture of the hardships endured by the destitute. He, with other Labour members, maintained that employment is the only sound way of solving unemployment. The Government's policy is almost entirely one of direct relief.

The speech on the unemployment debate made by Mr Stitt, Conservative member for Selkirk, Manitoba, is being much commented upon. Mr. Stitt called for "a muster of the forces of humanity" and also for "getting away from the shackles of the gold standard." He contended that the benefits of the Imperial conference will not be realized until there is a degree of currency reform, taking account of the depreciation of the pound overseas.

The agricultural debate was quite a good one calling out a number of informative speeches from the opposition parties and groups. Mr. Speakman stated: "that the price received for wheat, No. 1, Northern, at local points in Alberta is approximately 25c per bushel, and that that price fails to meet the cost of seed, repairs, oil and gas for machinery, bins, twine and other incidentals in respect to harvesting, threshing and hauling the crop, leaving out of consideration altogether the value of the land and equipment." He said it took no genius to see that no business could carry on indefinitely in such a way without becoming bankrupt. Mr. Speakman suggested the writing down of the amount of accumulated debts and the setting up of an export board.

Mr. Spencer, member for Battle River, said that the condition of agriculture undoubtedly constituted the most serious Canadian problem. He pointed out that the Government had in the past safeguarded the interests of industrial and financial groups and urged the Government to bring the value of our money to the level of that of our chief competitors. He gave the instance of a farmer in his constituency who sold 52 cows for $450 and a head of beef cattle for $120 and contended that such prices made it impossible for agriculture to carry on.

Mr Cameron R. Macintosh disapproved of the policy of settling the unemployed on the land, particularly the farmers from the dried out area being settled in his constituency.

North Battleford, contending that they have been placed upon inferior land and cannot, under the circumstances, look after themselves.

Mr. Coote argued again in favour of bringing our currency to a parity with that of our competitors and increasing the amount of Canadian currency in circulation by direct issue, as a means of helping solve the agricultural problem. He gave figures from the Bureau of Statistics to show that the purchasing power of agricultural products is 42 per cent higher in Australia than here.

In beginning my speech, I asked if I might be permitted once more to state the agricultural problem, and then proceeded to state it as follows: "It is this: there are three levels affecting the farmer. The first and lowest level is the level of his commodity prices. Above that is the level of the prices he must pay for the things he needs. There is a great disparity between these two. Above these two levels is the still higher level of debts. The farmer is required (if the nation is to escape disaster) to meet his obligations and to consume goods, and as things are at the moment, he simply cannot do it. Either the debt level must be scaled down closer to the commodity price level, or the commodity price level raised." I contended that Canada's remaining on the gold standard while her chief customer, (Great Britain), and her chief competitors in agricultural products have long since dropped the gold standard and inflated their currency, had been largely responsible for the great distance between the debt level and price level in this country, and also in a measure responsible for the too great difference in prices between the purchases and sales of the farmer.
