LIBERALS RETURNED TO POWER IN NOVA SCOTIA

A hot provincial election contest in Nova Scotia on Tuesday saw the Liberals carry 22 out of the 30 seats, overthrowing the Conservative government of Premier Harrington, after eight years in office. The new Premier, Angus MacDonald — elected to one of the Halifax seats, is only 43 years of age, and will be Canada's youngest premier.

Dissatisfaction with the Conservative regime at Ottawa and the depression which is hard on all governments, are the main causes of the sweep back to Liberalism. The result will probably banish any lingering idea in Premier Henry's mind of holding an Ontario election this fall.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE GREAT WAR

(London Free Press)

Time slips by so rapidly that it is hard to realize that it was some 19 years ago on Aug. 4th, that Great Britain entered the Great War on the side of France against Germany and Austria. It is difficult for a generation which has grown up in the meantime to appreciate the wave of patriotic fervor which swept over Canada. The response of the Dominion was instantaneous. There was no holding back. Ottawa was inundated with requests to join an overseas force, which it was taken for granted from the very first would be sent by Canada.

Except on the part of a few leaders, there was no appreciation of the seriousness of the struggle ahead. Most of those who went on the first expedition actually feared the war would be over before they reached the front. The first expeditionary force was a great achievement for a country unprepared for war. To Sir Sam Hughes must go most of the credit. It was his organizing ability, his driving force and tireless energy which made possible the rapid despatch of the greatest military armada in the world's history.

The war instead of being rapidly ended, dragged from year to year. It became a stubborn struggle of resources. There came the long sad list of casualties: the four black years, ending unexpectedly and almost suddenly with the economic collapse of Germany. Today we are paying plenty for the folly of the Great War. It is impossible to kill millions of men, destroy hundreds of millions of property and pile up billions of debt without someone paying, and we are paying today.

Was the war in vain? There are people who will say it was. There is a tendency today to say that it was a useless sacrifice. And yet, was it? Nothing worth while in this world is obtained without sacrifice or suffering. If Germany had been allowed to trample over Belgium and France and to over-run Europe, ideals such as are dominating Germany again today would have been triumphant. Our British civilization, with its traditions of liberty and freedom and its brother and sisters in this vicinity would have been in peril. The men who gave their lives from 1914 to 1918 fought, after all, to preserve everything we hold dear.

The war, though, will be in vain if the world does not learn the lessons of the struggle, if the nations do not seriously take steps to prevent another such catastrophe. Unfortunately today the movement for universal peace and disarmament are lagging. There are signs that would indicate the world is drifting into another struggle. There was never a time when there was such a need of co-operation on the part of lovers of peace throughout the world to insist on world unity for disarmament.

The Land of Dr. W.

Grenfell -- Labrador

A Cruise on the New Northland Clarke Steamship—by a Passenger, sister of Mrs. Jas. Kerr, Varnley.

At the request of many friends Miss Derby has written an account of her recent holiday trip which she has kindly given to the Review, believing it will be of interest to many readers. It is as follows:

Leaving Victoria Pier at Montreal on July 10th, at 8.30 p. m., through the lower St. Lawrence and under the great harbor bridge, we proceeded to Quebec where, on arriving next morning motor buses were in readiness to take the passengers to see the principal sights of interest in old Quebec. We then proceeded along the picturesque south shore of the river and as it broadens we see the small villages and hamlets, rolling hills and forests, rather crude fishing craft. Arrived at St. Anne des Monts, the second largest village on the Gaspe coast, we for an hour have a walk through the village or visit the church and then continue along the Gaspe coast and arrive later at Gaspe village.

The autos were waiting to take us on a sight-seeing trip through the village or to the Government salmon hatchery and pool. Back on board the ship we sail for Newfoundland where later we sail close to the famous Perce Rock and Bonaventure Island along where the sea fowl make their nests. As the ship siren blows they rise in great white clouds from the side of the rocks. Reaching the coast of Newfoundland, we enter the magnificent Bay of Islands, the scenery for 30 miles being of imposing grandeur; we reach the Corner Brook; arriving there in the evening, the travellers were invited to attend a dance and bridge at the Glynsmill Town hotel. Some spent a very enjoyable evening going around the town, others went to the dance and all had a good time.

In the morning there was a launch trip for $1.00 each on the Humber River, one of Newfoundland's famous salmon rivers which flows swiftly between precipitous banks rising to 1500, an excursion of 4 miles not soon to be forgotten. After lunch on board we were taken on a tour of the great paper mills (costing $48,000,000), had a very competent guide to demonstrate the whole process from log to newspaper.

Later we sailed northward along the Newfoundland coast line, coming close to Greenly Island where we saw the Lighthouse, a monument erected by the Clarke Steamship Company, to commemorate the landing of the Brethren, the first airplane to make a successful west bound trans-Atlantic flight. Later we saw the remains of the Raleigh, the British flagship lost near the entrance of Forteau Bay some years ago.

Around noon we dropped anchor in Forteau Bay, our first Labrador Port, the small fishing boats coming out to meet the passengers to visit the Grenfell mission station; here we had a first glimpse of the great work being done by these out-lying posts. Again sailing we enter the Straits of Belle and continue to the Atlantic and arrive at St. Anthony's, Newfoundland, on July 17, and spent all day at the headquarters of the Grenfell Association. Before leaving the steamer we were given a typed sheet on which was a list of sights not to be missed at St. Anthony's, including: The Industrial Sales shop, in which articles on sale are made by disabled fishermen, convalescent patients, and women of the coast; the Clothing store, a centre for the distributing of clothing (Miss Thompson in charge) (for labor only, never for cash, to all stations and villages. This is the International Grenfell Association's general store house; The Spot Cash Co-operative Co. Ltd., founded by Sir Wilfrid Grenfell, for fishermen; The Anchorage Inn where visitors can arrange to stop between steamers; greenhouse and gardens where they now grow tomatoes for canning for winter use; the hospital which is very much up-to-date; the Orphanage with 60 girls and boys, very well equipped in every way; Grenfell School, which was very good, also had a co-operative canning industry for canning salmon and vegetables; the model dog kennels on the water's edge; the Bobby Gray Cobbler Shop for Sealskin boots from Labrador; The Guesthouse, a residence for summer voluntary workers, the barn, where are cows, pigs and sheep; also a smoke house; the Industrial Work building headquarters for designing and giving work to the women to be done in their homes all along the coast, such as weaving, hooked mats, toy making, wood carving, etc.

The building was closed last winter owing to lack of funds. Visitors were requested not to give money to orphans or local children. We all spent a very busy day seeing all we could and returned to the steamer at 6 p. m., sailing soon after on our way back.

Next day we dropped anchor in Battle Harbour, site of the first mission established in Labrador by Dr. Grenfell. As it poured rain and there was a heavy fog, only a few went ashore in a small boat. The mission was burned down last year and they are now trying to rebuild. We turned south on the start of our homeward journey and arrived at Harrington Harbor where the Grenfell Association has a mission post and we had four ants in which to see something of the primitive life lived by the fishermen and fur traders. Here we could purchase rugs, blankets at Havre St. Pierre from the Hudson Bay Co. in the village. Cruising through the beautiful islands we saw many small villages, also the home of Donald Smith who later became Lord Strathcona.

Reaching the mouth of the Saguenay River with its mysterious depth, we cruised slowly up to Capes Trinity and Eternity where the ship "Trinity" was sighted and returned. It was sighted and returned. It was sighted and returned. It was sighted and returned.

meeting, Miss McCormick and assistants served delicious refreshments. Thus a pleasant afternoon was brought to a close. The September meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. S. Davey. All members are cordially invited.

SPORTS of all SORTS

The odds for winning the race in the big Women's Marathon swim classic at Toronto this Friday afternoon, go to Ruth Tower-Corsan. She has entered before, both as Ruth Tower of Denver and the wife of Capt. Geo. H. Corsan of Toronto—and she hasn't taken down the big money yet. But she has faced three such world wonders as Ethel Hertie, Martha Norvell and Margaret Ravior. There are no Herties, Norvelles nor Raviors, in there this year and so Mrs. Corsan shapes up as the girl to beat for the big money.

George Young, Canada's long-distance swimmer, is again in the limelight, as an entrant in the men's marathon swim at Toronto Exhibition this year. There was much conjecture on the part of the fans as to whether he would hold in his card. Temperamental George at the last moment came along at the last chance for registering with his signature. He was needed to give color to the swim and whether married life has improved his prowess or otherwise remains to be seen.

Hanover has finished second place in the Grey baseball league, losing out to Meaford, who are champions for 1933. Hanover has travelled far in hard ball this year and are now ball conscious. Thornbury appears at the bottom of the list this year.

The Harnsworth Trophy is again to again shortly to be contested on the St. Clair river between the American champion, Gar Wood, and the new British challenger, Scott-Paine, recently arrived from England. Gar Wood was too much for Kaye Don, the doughty Britisher of last year, also 1931. Scott-Paine seems a terrible name to carry around, but let us hope all things being equal, that he develops a real pain 'in Gar Wood.

HONORS TO T. EATON COMPANY OFFICIAL

The firm of T. Eaton Co., Ltd., did itself proud on Monday afternoon last in no less a place than the mammoth Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, when the officials and huge staff, comprising in all, some 15,000 souls, gathered to honor Col. Harry McGee, Vice-President of the Company, who has completed 50 years of service for the firm. In addition to the employees of the firm 500 seats were set aside for former employees and old friends of Col. McGee. The Colonel was moved as the succession of speakers arose to eulogize his untiring efforts on behalf of the firm and those associated with it.

Mr. Eaton started out with the three main slogans for doing business which were "Selling Goods for Cash," "One Price Only" and "Goods Satisfactory or Money Refunded." His successors have followed the same traditions of honor and honesty. In reply to the seven beautiful illuminating addresses read to him, Col. McGee addressed the vast gathering in part: "The great days for Canada are just beginning. I have travelled this wonderful land from coast to coast—I have seen something of its untold wealth of resources, I know the spirit of its people, and I say that the greatest days of all are still to come! Canada is yet the land of opportunity and the youth of Canada today are among the most highly blessed in all the world."
