

Pleased With Canada

The magnificent scenery of Canada so enthralled Lord Macmillan chairman of the Royal Commission on banking, the Scotsman though he be, he confessed, just prior to sailing for England on the Empress of Britain, that it dwarfed the scenery of Scotland, and that the only thing needed was for some author to blend it with the romantic history of Canada, as Sir Walter Scott had blended the scenery of Scotland with the romantic history of the land of Bonnie Prince

Jury Returns Verdict in Fenton Car Collision

A coroner's jury of Chatsworth citizens, at the inquest held in Chatsworth hall, on Monday afternoon, brought in the following verdict after an hour's deliberation: "We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of Minnie Conley, find as follows: "1-That the said Minnie Conley met her death on the first day of October 1933, at or about 1.30 p.m. "2-That the death of the said Minnie Conley occurred on Highway No 6, about three miles south of the village of Chatsworth. "3-That the death of the said Minnie Conley was due to injuries sustained in a motor accident at this point. "4-That the accident was caused by a car owned by Clarence Fenton of Holstein and driven by his wife, Hazel Fenton, being out of control, attributed to the car travelling at a higher rate of speed than the condition of the road warranted. "Dr. M. Phillips of Chatsworth, acted as coroner, and Crown Attorney W. D. Henry, K. C. questioned the witnesses.

A WARNING TO THE PROSPECTIVE GROOM

(P. F. Beirne, in the Baltimore Sun) First it is pertinent to enquire as to why men marry? The answer is very simple. It is because they become engaged; and once a man becomes engaged, he cannot easily escape marriage without causing complications. Most men hate complications, so much so, in fact, that to avoid immediate complications they will flee to complications they know not of. Marriage is so regulated by conventions and so much a matter of emotion that little useful advice can be advanced with regard to the selection of a wife. However, it seems fair to assume that a wife should be delivered in reasonably sound condition. If her tonsils, appendix and wisdom teeth have not been removed, a prospective husband should feel no hesitancy in asking her parents for at least a three-year guarantee. If the bride is willing to slip away quietly and have the knot tied by a justice of the peace, she is either a widow, or a woman of doubtful age - or she likes to be different. And if she likes to be different about her wedding she will probably continue to like to be different and cause all sorts of complications later on. Therefore, if for no other reason, the church wedding, unpleasant as it may be for the bridegroom, is insurance against abnormality. Further, the big wedding has the advantage of being followed by a big reception, and it is a generally accepted rule that anyone who attends a wedding reception must come through with a fine present. A few days before the wedding, the bridegroom will be conducted by the bride to a room in her father's house where the presents have been laid out. To an unanesthetic bridegroom, this is about as exciting as wandering about in a department store, but he is expected to display great enthusiasm. He must count on being embarrassed over the smallness and insignificance of the presents of his friends and family as compared with those of the bride's friends and family, as the average man is notoriously weak in building up a wedding-present clientele. Theoretically the bridegroom selects the ushers from his intimate friends, but practically he can work in only a few of them for he must eliminate all that are too fat or too bald or too short and he must include the bride's brother or favorite cousin. The bridegroom has no further responsibility until he is summoned to the church, save that when he confronts the clergyman he should have already handed over the fee to the best man. The sum of course, varies, but generally speaking twice as much as the bridegroom feels he can afford is about what the clergyman will expect. The peeling of notes from a roll of money is not consistent with the dignified atmosphere of a church and the money should be enclosed in an envelope to avoid vulgar display. Any method of bestowal will do, so long as the clergyman will get it without the bridegroom seeming to give it or the clergyman seeming to receive it. In the actual ceremony the bridegroom plays a relatively unimportant role. His responses are given him by the clergyman in small doses so that he is not called upon to exert undue mental effort. In the recessional he is expected to give the applause to the bride by looking at her out of the corner of his eye and registering pride. He should smile without showing his teeth. There remains now the ordeal of the reception. The groom's smile here should display the teeth and he must do his best not to look spent. But it has been a long and hard day for everybody. Plans for a honeymoon are guided not so much by what you actually want as by what will sound well to your friends and acquaintances. It is customary to observe great secre-

KNOX CORNERS

Our pastor took his message on Sunday from words found in 2 Kings 19:12 'And after the fire still small voice.' Elijah after his wonderful victory and after having slain the prophets of Baal, is now in the wilderness and depressed and wanting to die, because of the threat of a wicked woman Jezebel. But God spoke to Elijah very plainly, but not by the wind or the earthquake or the fire, but by the still small voice. And God speaks to us to-day by that same voice if our ears are open to hear them and if our cares and work and pleasure do not so fill our lives that we have no time left for God. Mr and Mrs Wm. Mather and little daughter, Hampden, visited Sunday with Mr and Mrs C. McAlister. Mr and Mrs R. R. Watson and Mr and Mrs J. M. Marshall attended Anniversary Services at Holstein Presbyterian church, Sunday, and visited with relatives. Mr and Mrs T. Wallace visited with Owen Sound friends a day last week and attended the plowing match Mrs D. McLean and son Marshall, Toronto are the guests this week of her parents and other friends. Our district was well represented at the plowing match held near O. Sound last week. A mistake in the items last week. The Y. P. Community club met at the home of Miss Susie Marshall, not Mrs Andrew Marshall as mentioned in the items—the fault of the printer this time. We were glad to be present at meeting and enjoy the pleasant time. Mr and Mrs Wm Porter visited with Holstein friends Sunday and attended Anniversary services.

As to destination, except that the two families are the less members of the two families and the half dozen intimate friends of the bride are admitted into the confidence of the couple. This provides publicity equivalent to a full-page advertisement in a newspaper. Granted that your funds are limited, two kinds of honeymoon are possible. You may dispense your cash in the prospect of a quick turnover, or distribute it thinly over a long period. The quick turnover honeymoon is the one spent at any resort of national distinction commonly patronized by millionaires. In any event a week is the shortest time possible for a honeymoon. At the end of that period you may let it be known that you have been summoned home on urgent business. That not only relieves your financial problem but also suggests that you are a man of quite considerable importance. The long-term honeymoon admits of much greater freedom of action. Here the destination must be vaguely expressed but in a manner that will suggest something quite as luxurious as the name of the resort that caters to millionaires. "An extended motor trip to the South" can be made in a second hand car, via tourist camps, yet it conjures up a picture of an eight cylinder car, sports model, speeding from Hot Springs to Pinehurst and to Palm Beach. Another lovely expression suggestive of refinement, intellectuality and an appreciation of the beauties of nature is "Motoring in the Berkshires". If you have an "estate" placed at your disposal, so much the better. Any old farmhouse will do. Mountains are preferable to seaside resorts as a rule as they are less thickly populated and the illusion must be maintained that the newlyweds are anxious to be left completely alone. The journey by boat cannot be recommended generally, unless it is strictly confined to canals, bays, rivers and other inland waterways. There is only one thing more tragic than a bride who is a victim of seasickness and that is a bridegroom similarly afflicted. It is a sufficiently difficult task for a newly-married couple to keep their equilibrium on dry land without having added to it the complexities of a rocking vessel. The honeymoon, in any event, constitutes a sort of chrysalis stage in which the care-free young man enters to emerge, after a suitable interval, a husband. When a man gets his nose knocked under his ear, it is still the center of his face. If you have something you are not using, why not sell it? A small adlet in the Review may find a buyer.
