May Make Changes in B. N. A. Act

 General will be brought before the Public Accounts Committee of the House of Commons.
 Hon. W. D. Euler is noted in the House for making short but thoughtful speeches. He is intellectually honest which makes his remarks always interesting. After the debate on the Relief Bill seemed to have become threadbare, he made a fresh and arresting speech. "It seems to me," he said, "that all efforts in connection with relief in the last few years and as contemplated under the bill now before the committee, have been predicted upon the assumption that this is an emergency only. I should like to venture the opinion that unemployment has become and will continue to be, a more or less permanent factor." He suggested that the Government seek a method of caring for the permanently unemployed. He recommended also that social legislation be co-ordinated under Federal control, mentioning workmen's compensation, widow's allowance, insurance for ill-health, old age pensions, poor relief and unemployment insurance when it becomes law.
 Mr. Euler recognized the need of amending the British North America Act to enable the Federal Government to administer social services, and suggested a commission being appointed to study the whole question. The Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett pleased the House by stating that he held a very strong opinion "as to the necessity of an early revision of the provisions of the British North America Act." "The Provinces," he said, "have exclusive legislative control over the matters mentioned in Section 92 of the B. N. A. Act. Unless there is agreement by them all, you will have a situation such as you have today with respect to old age pensions."
 Ottawa had the opportunity of seeing and hearing Sir Stafford Cripps, K. C., M.P., for East Bristol in the British House of Commons. Sir Stafford is credited with being the leader of the left wing of the Labour party. He stated that he believed one of the most vital factors in initiating planned economy is to get into the hands of the community the control of its own credit, thus making it possible to bring about a fair distribution of national wealth. This, he said, would be quite impossible as long as credit remains a matter of private enterprise. "I believe," said Sir Stafford, "it is absolutely essential that anybody who desires change to go into the right channels, should organize the Christian forces of the world to support that change in an open, political way." Which recalls a statement I read this week issued by St. Peter's Church, Coventry, England on "Why the present money power is a spiritual evil." It enumerated ten reasons, of which I will quote seven:
 "Because of depriving multitudes of God's children of His natural gifts to them, it causes poverty and misery.
 Because it makes people hopeless, driving many to suicide, and weakening the hold of many more upon their belief in God.
 Because it makes it increasingly hard for people to bear and rear children, seeing the difficulty in giving them opportunities for a secure and free life.
 Because it thrives upon class divisions and increases the separation of man from man.
 Because it perverts science, strange art, and corrupts general culture. Because it is the real root of war.
 Because it has already obtained a large control over the Church, so that many who might be our leaders are afraid to speak out.
 To overthrow such a power and replace it with a more human system is in itself a spiritual act."
 A signed manifesto in the British Times appeared recently demanding financial reform and the setting up of a system under which the issue and recall of currency and credit will be regulated on a rational, national and scientific basis, so that the correct number of money tokens shall be available to consumers to enable them to enjoy the output of production. Or, in other words, that the amount of money in people's pockets should equal the value of goods and services on the market. The statement was signed by two former presidents of the London Board of Trade and by a former Lord Mayor of London, as well as many other important gentlemen. There is no doubt that interest in unorthodox finance is spreading rapidly.
 The Stevens committee is still investigating price spreads. At present it is dealing with livestock prices and interesting facts have come out regarding practices of the livestock buyers and their virtual dictation of prices to cattle raisers. Information on spreads is coming in daily to the members of the group in the corner.' This week one of them received a most interesting letter, accompanied by a photograph of the shop window of one of Montreal's largest department stores. The picture shows two piles of goods. In one pile is a bag of flour and a bag of sugar; in the other pile the same two bags are nearly hidden by dozens of other bottles, packages and tins. The statement accompanying the picture is as follows:

 Variable weather, snow and rain, but today, Monday, an agreeable change to bright and warm.
 Mr and Mrs Art Coutts, Conn, and Mr. Denzil Haas, Stratford, visited recently with Mr. and Mrs James Coutts.
 Alex Sim, Newmarket, was a guest in Mr A. Haas' home last week.
 We learned with regret of the sudden passing of Oliver Rogers at his home at Saskatoon. His boyhood was spent in this locality and many will look back to school days at S.S. No. 9, and think of him as one of their number. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family.
 Harvey McDougall, Bruce Co. and Arthur Haas attended a conference of the New Canada Movement at Kemptville, Grenville Co. on April 10 and 11. The conference was held in the Agricultural College, invited thereto by the President, Professor Bell. On Tuesday, the program consisted of an address of welcome by Prof. Bell; a splendid speech by Rev. Merrickville on "Youth and the Crisis"; Addresses by Ralph Staples, Harvey McDougall and Arthur Haas, on the progress of "The New Canada Movement." Wednesday, they listened to Rev Father St. Denis of Ottawa who is a member of the examination board of the New Canada Movement. He told what he hoped the youth of to-day would accomplish, if they would apply themselves to the study courses, and base their criticisms of present day problems on Christian principles. Rev. Warwick Kelloway, Ottawa, gave an outline of the Christian Commonwealth Youth movement, which he started in his church last October and which has spread to neighboring towns and cities. He hoped the two "Youth" movements could join forces as their object was much alike—that of a better informed electorate. Mervin Peters, Dundas city, gave a splendid talk on youth movements in other countries. Miss M. Earl, Spencerville, gave a synopsis of the book "Cry Havoc" and "Youth and War", showing the great need of the nations, including Canada, to prepare for peace, not war. Donald McLean, Kent Co., thanked all those who had taken a part in the conference and predicted a successful campaign in Eastern Canada, with the co-operation of the French speaking people. Thursday, the boys motored to Ottawa and spent the day on Parliament Hill. They saw the Memorial Tower, erected in memory of the 61,000 Canadians who lost their lives in the Great War. Parliament was in session and they heard speeches from both sides of House. With the memory of courtesies extended by several M. P.'s, and a lasting impression of the magnificence of our Parliament Buildings, they said farewell to the capital city.
