Miss Macphail states her streng h is in her independence in voting for the policy before the party and uses her judgement how to vote accordingly

Elsewhere in the Review columns this week, is an extract from the Wiarton Canadian Echo, Editor Duncan sees her downfall in the coming Dominion election, which brings the following comment from Hugh Templin of the Fergus "News-Record."

"Since Editor Duncan is an enthusiastic Liberal, we are not surprised to see a heading in the Wiarton Canadian Echo: "Agnes is Headed For the Political Graveyard." The 'Agnes' of Course, is Miss Macphail, M. P., who has represented South Grey for some fourteen years. And Mr Duncan is probably correct. We see a good many of the papers from those ridings up North and we have often ad mired the way that she has represented her constituency and the way she has kept in touch with it. That has brought her through three or four campaigns, and now it seems that the luck of the political game has gone against her, and no matter how good a member she may be, or how popular personally, she hasn't a chance, just because she doesn't happen to belong to the party that is rising in a steady wave of popularity. for voters are like sheep and they all tend to run in the same direction at the same time.
