Building Boom

Industries Working Overtime to Supply Materials In United Kingdom

London - Building activity in Britain has bequeathed the country's brick-making industry so much work that manufacturers are finding difficulty in getting it all done.

A rush to keep pace with orders, several firms working as much as six hours overtime, and a 300 per cent, increase in imports of bricks to fulfill demands which cannot be satisfied by home production are disclosed as items in expansion prolems now facing brick makers.

Meanwhile added significance is given to these disclosurers, it is said by the recent publication of the report of the National Housing Committee, which suggests a Statutory Commission to organize a supply of materials for a 10-years housing scheme. It is considered that this would have an important effect in stabilizing "see-saw" motions of demands for bricks.

The present deluge of orders results from "a poor man's boom." It only manufacturers of bricks for the cheaper type of dwelling houses. More expensive bricks to visit his brother who lived on a and stone facings used for important farm a few miles out. He ran into a yet in great demand.

Returns show that in May, 1933, 10,563,000 bricks were imported. The figures for May this year rose to 25,966,000. June shows an increase to a total of 32,887,000 bricks. Elsewhere, although many manufacturers declare themselves to be "snowed under," employment is improving without showing any

As soon as confidence is lost, the local authorities drop their housing plans. And the brick industry, expanded to meet an expected constant large demand over several years, suffers immediately. Many men are thrown out of work.

Leaders of the industry declare that if they could be given a guarantee that local housing schemes, once started, would be carried to completion, they could expand without fear and so help to stabilize the figures of employment.

Such a state of affairs has been visualized as an integral part of any new national housing plan by the National Housing Committee, under the chairmanship of Lord Amulree, vice-president of the Building Industries National Council.

The proposed Statutory Commission would survey housing needs, help local authorities, and see that slum clearance and rehousing were brought under one coherent national The building program would be financed, Lord Amulree's committee declares by a National Housing Stock under Treasury guar-

The committee has budgeted for a minimum of 1,000,000 new houses or of 10 shillings a week or less.

After an intensive search into prevailing building costs and land charges, the committee has come to the conclusion that subsidization would only be necessary where land is exceptionally expensive and rates high, or where the workers cannot afford 10 shillings a week.

But most important to the brick industry, the committee declares that a housing commission such as they envisage should organize a supply of materials so as to keep down costs by making demand a known quantity. Although the Amulree committee was a self-constituted body with no legal or constitutional significance its report seems to have been favorably received. The committee included among its members a past president of the Royal Institute of British Architects, three housing authorities, a director of the Bank of England, and two celebrated progressive business men as well as some technical authorities.

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot ... "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more. All you have to do is to neutralize

Award Made in Car Dispute

Pittsburgh - Settlement of the long-standing car men's dispute with the Pittsburgh Railways Company has been reached by a special arbitration board's action in awarding the men a wage increase of 20 per cent. The board at the same time recommended that the car men be placed on a five-day schedule instead of the present six-day work week, consequently giving them their present pay for the shorter week.
