James H. Coleridge Passes Away in Toronto

The death took place at his residence, 97 Springmount Ave., Toronto on Saturday, Feb. 2nd, of James H. Coleridge, a well-known native son and former citizen of Egremont Tp. He was in his 69th year. He is survived by his wife, and one daughter Jean, Mrs. Cecil McKaughan, also of Toronto.

For the past few years, Mr. Coleridge has been slowly declining in health. Three years ago, it is thought he suffered from a slight stroke, which while regaining activity, left a weaker frame and constitution. His heart was badly affected thereby and since that date he was not the same man. On Christmas Day 1934, he again became acutely ill and the end was hastened by a paralytic stroke on Thursday last, Jan. 31. His wife and daughter have been most faithful and constant in attendance and will feel the separation keenly.

The news of the death of James H. Coleridge will come as a great sense of personal loss to many readers of the Review scattered far and wide. The majority of his working days were spent in the school-room, and to the many pupils now scattered over Canada and United States, his death will be heard of with great regret. Mr. Coleridge was a born teacher, and the drilling into young minds the rudiments of the English language, as well as inculcating the principles of truth and right-living in plastic stage of their career, they never forgot. He passes on but his works do follow him.

Deceased was the fifth son of the late Daniel and Mrs. Coleridge, pioneers of the 19th con., Egremont. His school days (Public) were spent under the tutorage of such teachers of the olden day as Alexander Ferguson, Robt. Bell and W. J. Sharp, all at S.S. No. 13, Egremont. Little he thought at that time he would preside over this same home school for 13 years, some years later.

He attended Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, the Model School in Durham, and the Normal School in Toronto in 1893. For some years he taught in the vicinity of Toronto, also at Old Durham Road, Artemesia Tp. and the final 13 years in Dromore School.

While resident at Dromore, he played half-back on Dromore's one-time famous football team. He was intensely interested in all forms of sport and followed closely through the press the ups and downs of the various professional leagues of baseball and hockey. Also was musically inclined, and through native ability and diligence, could read music as well as play his own accompaniments.

In 1907, he was wedded to Miss Mary Isaac, also of Dromore, they coming to Durham in 1912, to live, where Mr. Coleridge was accountant for two years of the then flourishing National Portland Cement Co. In 1914, Mr and Mrs. Coleridge bought a home in Toronto, and moved thereto. On the cessation of the war in 1918, the Provincial Gov't undertook the Soldiers' Civil Service Re-establishment, whereby returned men were given the opportunity to further their education, to equip them to better enter the civic life once more. In this capacity as teacher and instructor, Mr. Coleridge served with great acceptance for several years, in the former Knox College which obstructs Spadina Ave. For some time also he was employed as night school instructor.

Real estate, in the boom years, also found vent for a time for Mr. Coleridge's energy. The past eight years, he has practically led a retired life. It was his great pleasure to be visited by many friends, and the fact that they came from Egremont Tp., was assurance of a welcome alone. In Toronto, he was one of the promoters of the "Egremont picnic", held annually for some years and as well was interested and attended several social evenings of the Durham Club in the city. He had a great capacity for friendship, and was held in the highest esteem wherever he went.

In Toronto, he was a member of St. Clair Ave. United church, and was interred Tuesday from his late residence under its auspices, at Prospect cemetery. The service was conducted by Rev. A. J. Langford, his pastor, and by Rev. C. A. Mustard, a former pastor of the Coleridge family. The pall bearers were old friends, namely: John Campbell, Wm. Rennie, (Agincourt), Charles Milne, Harry Davidson, John Rocks, Luther Phillips.

Of a one-time family of ten children, five brothers and sisters survive: Daniel Coleridge, Holstein; Louisa, Mrs Wm. Ramage, Priceville; Elizabeth, Mrs R. P. Legate, Edmonton; Mary, Mrs Charles Ramage, of Durham; Frank Coleridge, of Nut Mountain, Sask.
